STOCK EXCHANGE WILL OPEN BOOKS TO 'LEAK' HUNTERS

Every Transaction from Dec. 10 to 23 Will Be Available for House Committee.

ACTION AFTER CONTROVERSY

Losses, Profits, and Evidence of a Bear Pool on the President's Peace Note Sought.

CABLE "TIP" IS SUSPECTED

President Noble Quizzed by Counsel and Members, Who Intimate Inquiry May Be Widened.

The Governors of the New York Stock Exchange, at a hastily summoned conference last night, decided to request the Exchange's 1,100 members to make available to the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives, which opened its "leak" inquiry at the Custom House yesterday, full records of transactions, with the names of clients, from Dec. 10 to 23—the days when information about the President's peace note might have affected the stock market.

This action was taken upon demand of the committee, and it marked a precedent. Never before has such a request been made by the Exchange of its members, and it was made only after the counsel for the committee assured the Governors that the names of clients of brokerage houses would not be made public unless tangible evidence supporting the "leak" innuendoes should be unearthed.

Singularly enough, the name of Thomas W. Lawson, Boston speculator, by many regarded as the instigator of the whole "leak" inquiry, was not mentioned yesterday before the committee.

It was reported at first that brokers were greatly disturbed over what they regarded as a threatened invasion of their rights. It was pointed out that the Exchange authorities had no power to compel members to supply the desired information, for instance, and Governor Whitney declared that many of the brokers might resist any attempt to open their books to public view. When the modified request of the committee was studied, however, making it reasonably certain that the names of traders would not be spread broadcast, the attitude of the brokers became less hostile.

The action of the Governors came as the culmination of thinly veiled threats of Congressional action to regulate the Stock Exchange, and possibly to prosecute members alleged to have engaged in pools to depress the value of securities, and an attack upon the theory of "short sales" with the implied suggestion that it might be a wise thing to put an end to such practices.

Resisted, Then Capitulated.

The exchange officials resisted for hours against granting the request for names and data in its original form, and held two hastily summoned meetings, the last of which was in session until 7 o'clock. Then on the promise that the names would not be revealed, unless evidence of importance was discovered they capitulated.

Among the men whose accounts the committee desires to inspect is Bernard Baruch, one of the heavy "short sellers" who has been frequently named as a beneficiary of advance information on President Wilson's peace note, and who has denied any such foreknowledge. The move did not worry him, as he attended the afternoon session of the committee expecting to be called.

"I have brought everything the committee asked me to bring," he said, sorting his papers. The resolutions of the Governors follow:

Whereas, The Rules Committee of the House of Representatives has asked the Governing Committee to request the members of the Exchange, for the convenience of the Rules Committee and to facilitate its investigation of the transactions on the Exchange from Dec. 10 to 23, 1916, inclusive, and in order to avoid the necessity of subpoenaing the books of a large number of brokers which might on examination prove immaterial to the investigation, to furnish to the Chairman of the Committee on Clearing House of the Exchange in sealed envelopes, to be opened and examined by the accountants of the Rules Committee only in case the course of the investigation appears to render the examination thereof material, the information hereafter mentioned;

Resolved, That the Governing Committee request the members of the Exchange to furnish forthwith to the Chairman of the Committee on Clearing House the following statement for each day from the 10th to the 23d of December, 1916, inclusive:

First—Of what Clearing House stocks each customer was long, of what Clearing House stocks he was short at the end of the day, giving the name of the customer, the stock, and the number of shares each.

Second—What Clearing House stocks were borrowed, when and from whom borrowed, and when returned.

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Exchange be instructed to transmit a copy of these resolutions to the members of the Exchange.

Wire "Leak" Data Also Sought.

This resolution was adopted also at the request of the Rules Committee:

Whereas, The Rules Committee of the House of Representatives has requested the Governing Committee to inquire of all the members of the Exchange if they received any cable, wireless communication or information of any sort from abroad with reference to the President's note to belligerents and to neutrals;

Resolved, That the members of the Exchange be and they are hereby requested to answer such inquiry by letter to the Secretary of the Exchange to be furnished to

New Mayor of Dublin Was Jailed in Rebellion

DUBLIN, Jan. 23. (via London.)—Alderman Lawrence O'Neill was unanimously elected today Lord Mayor of Dublin.

Alderman O'Neill was arrested at the time of the late rebellion and kept in jail for some days. He was then released without any charge having been made against him.

In an impassioned speech, after his election today, referring to those indignities, he stated that as Lord Mayor he would not receive any man or regiment which came to exploit the city politically, but would receive either King or peasant coming with a message of peace.

WASHINGTON ORDERS PERSHING TO RETIRE

ZAPATA ALLIED WITH VILLA

Made 8,000 Men Near Chihuahua for Campaign—Banks Protest Loans Were Forced.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Troop movements preliminary to withdrawal of the American expedition from Mexico are being carried out at the southern extremity of the American line under War Department orders, and as soon as they are complete the main body of the expedition probably will start north.

For the first time officials admitted today that the withdrawal of outposts from El Valle and other points south of Colonia Dublan had more than a local significance, and was being carried out on orders from Washington. They made no announcement as to the probable time when the general northern movement would begin, and would not even admit that the withdrawal of Pershing's troops, after ten months in Mexico, was at hand. Since the effort to effect an agreement with General Carranza ended in failure the Administration has indicated that its next step would be made known through action rather than by announcement.

Officials are much interested, but apparently little concerned, over growing evidences that a determined struggle for possession of the territory evacuated by Pershing may be in progress soon between Carranza troops and revolutionists. Today's official dispatches said that Villa and Zapata, the two Carranza leaders most conspicuous, had allied themselves for operations against the de facto Government armies, and that 8,000 men had been concentrated near Chihuahua for a Villa campaign in the north.

Since Carranza declined to accept the Atlantic City protocol officials here have indicated that such problems as the one developed about Chihuahua not only would be left to the First Chief for settlement, but that he would be held responsible by the United States Government for their settlement in such a way as to protect American interests.

Meantime, raising of the embargo on arms shipments to Mexico and the dispatch of Ambassador Fletcher to Mexico City remain in abeyance. There were indications today that the prospect of sending the Ambassador to his post had been made more indefinite by two developments construed in some quarters as a renewal of practices of the Carranza Government against which the United States repeatedly has protested.

Officials are surprised and perplexed over the drastic measures taken by the First Chief against the banks whose metallic reserve recently was seized, and by what some contend is a revival of persecution of the Roman Catholic clergy.

Information reaching the British Embassy today from an official of the Bank of London and Mexico and the National Bank of Mexico was that the bullion and specie taken from the banks was a "loan only" in the sense that it was forced. From the Bank of London and Mexico the amount taken was valued at 4,000,000 pesos. The National Bank's quota was 5,000,000 pesos. Remaining in the vaults of the three are 26,000,000 pesos, and the institution's officers fear that this also may be removed. Agents of the De Facto Government are in possession of the building and the keys to the vault.

The problem presented by the seizures has been called to the attention of the State Department again by representatives of the stockholders, who are for the most part British and French. If representations are made by the American State Department they probably will be based on the assumption that the interests of American stockholders may be injured.

The fate of the two prelates arrested in Mexico charged with conspiracy remained unknown here late today. The State Department already has made earnest representations in their behalf. Both at the State Department and at the White House scores of telegrams and letters were received appealing to the American Government to exercise every power to prevent their conviction and execution. Cardinal Gibbons was among those who sent such appeals.

THINK WITHDRAWAL AT HAND.

Officers Predict Pershing Will Be Ordered Out This Week.

EL PASO, Texas, Jan. 23.—Army officers, including those arriving from Columbus, N. M., tonight predicted a formal order from the War Department within the next forty-eight hours for the withdrawal of the American troops from Mexico. They said General Pershing's main column should be under way to the border before the end of the present week.

All sick soldiers in the field hospital at Colonia Dublan and in the smaller hospitals along the line of communication were sent to the border today. Four hundred motor trucks and lorries are plying between the border and headquarters at Columbus.

A train of Carranza troops left Juarez today to garrison El Valle. The first American outpost troops reported to have arrived at Colonia Dublan late today. Before leaving El Valle they dynamited all of the adobe houses which they built as shelters.

Truck drivers arriving here reported that 5,000 natives and foreigners in the zone occupied by the punitive expedition were preparing to march to the border behind the troops. All fear that Villa will occupy the country as soon as it is evacuated by General Pershing's troops.

DESTROYERS MEET IN TWO BATTLES IN NORTH SEA

GERMAN COMMANDER SLAIN

47 LOST ON BRITISH SHIP

LONDON, Jan. 23.—In an engagement between British light naval forces and German torpedoboat destroyers in the North Sea last night a German destroyer was sunk and the other torpedo craft scattered, it was officially announced tonight.

The sinking of a British torpedoboat destroyer in another engagement with German torpedoboat destroyers in the vicinity of Schouwen Bank last night, with the loss of three officers and forty-four of the crew, also was announced.

The text of the official announcement follows:

"Last night, while our light forces were patrolling the North Sea not far from the Dutch coast, they met a division of enemy torpedoboat destroyers. A short engagement took place, during which one of the enemy torpedoboat destroyers was sunk and the rest scattered, having suffered considerable punishment. Darkness prevented the full results of the action from being observed.

"During last night there was also a short, sharp engagement between enemy torpedoboat destroyers and our own destroyers in the vicinity of Schouwen Bank. During this engagement one of our torpedoboat destroyers was struck by a torpedo, the explosion killing three officers and forty-four of the crew. She subsequently was sunk by our own ships. Relatives of the victims have been informed. Our ships suffered no other casualties."

The V-69 Reaches Ymuiden.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

YMUIDEN, Holland, Jan. 23, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—I have heard the fullest possible account of a naval engagement which took place on this bitter Winter morning, not many miles from the Dutch coast, at the point between The Hague and Ymuiden. That the fight was sharp, sudden, and very furious while it lasted there can be little doubt, for the one German torpedo boat which reached Ymuiden with the help of Dutch tugs shows ample evidence that, as a naval expert remarked, "she had just about as much as she could carry into port."

The German boat, that lies up to the quay here, is the V-69, or rather what remains of her. One of her funnels lies almost horizontal with the deck, twisted and bent. Her bridge is shattered, and the metal, canvas, wood, and iron hang about it and about her mast in an inextricable tangle. Her steering gear is smashed and her decks smeared with blood. Her three guns still stand on their swivels, but all the machinery adjacent to them is a mass of twisted iron.

She lies almost under the water astern, only being kept afloat with all possible devices. Her six torpedo tubes are much knocked about, and it indicates the sudden and severe nature of the attack by the British ships that only one torpedo had been fired. The five other tubes were loaded and ready, but there was no chance of discharging them in the storm of shot which must have poured into her.

Another damaged German warship is slowly making for Ymuiden. From all available reports here and from the few words dropped by the wounded men of the crew of the V-69 before silence was sternly and officially impressed on them the following account of what took place was gathered:

Ordered to Steal Out of Zeebrugge.

It appears that the harbor of Zeebrugge is becoming frozen over, so that the German flotilla of torpedo boats was in danger of becoming fixed in the ice and would therefore have been in great danger of destruction from the fire of the British monitors or other vessels. The German command, therefore, decided to send the entire flotilla out of that port at midnight, with orders to steal through the darkness as near and as safe to the Dutch coast as it could and make for a German harbor.

The number of ships in the German flotilla is given as fourteen, though some say only twelve.

All went well until at a point somewhere between The Hague and Ymuiden. Here their luck vanished, for, without warning, they suddenly found themselves under a terrific fire from a large number of British warships which loomed up out of the darkness. How many British ships were in the immediate neighborhood it is impossible to say. Some of the wounded say they saw twelve, some sixty, and some 100.

It would appear that the Germans must have been ignorant of the strength of the British forces, for it was not until 9 o'clock this morning that the last of the German ships was seen steaming full speed in a northerly direction from a point little to the north

German States Start Plans for a Rhine-Danube Canal

MUNICH, Jan. 23, (via Berlin to London).—The project of a canal connecting the Danube and the Rhine is about to take tangible shape. It is understood that the Bavarian Government will soon introduce in the Chamber a bill providing for the construction of a canal capable of accommodating vessels of 1,200 tons. The work will cost $150,000,000, and it is estimated that it will occupy eight years.

An organization consisting of representatives of the empire, several States and municipalities, and industrial interests will have charge of the work, which it is expected will be begun after the peace settlement.

WOMEN GULL BERLIN IN FOOD SWINDLE

PAID 20 PER CENT. DIVIDENDS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 23.—Frau Meta Kupfer has been arrested here for swindling operations that almost rival those of Mme. Humbert of Paris. She did business under the name of "Foodstuff Supply, M. G. Kupfer," which to many people sounded highly official and encouraged small capitalists especially to invest their money with her. These investors received promises of yearly interest of 5 per cent. and monthly dividends.

Frau Kupfer rented a large, handsomely furnished office. Close observers might have noticed that among the people who thronged the rooms were more willing to invest whatever money they had than buyers of foodstuffs. The former were generally admitted to Frau Kupfer's sanctum, where she herself received their money with a gracious smile and the promise of a high dividend. This dividend, amounting in some cases to 10 and even 20 per cent. monthly, was promptly paid, the high profits being explained by the high prices of certain table luxuries which were not under Government control and in which the firm pretended to do a large business.

If an investor became suspicious or thought he had profited enough and wanted his money back, he was promptly paid, and for every one who thus withdrew ten new investors were ready to come in.

All went well for many months until Frau Kupfer got tired of dealing with small investors. She now took a very large apartment on the fashionable Kaiserdamm, which was splendidly furnished and presided over by herself and her young and handsome daughter. To this place the two women managed to attract a number of wealthy people from whom they selected their victims.

One of these became suspicious and informed the police of their operations. While the officials were searching the house a woman visitor was announced, and Frau Kupfer was permitted to see her in presence of a detective. This visitor brought 800,000 marks, which she said she wished to invest in Frau Kupfer's business. Nearly 500,000 marks ($119,000) in cash and bankbooks showing deposits of some 600,000 marks (nominally $142,800) were found in the house on the Kaiserdamm, and smaller sums at the business office.

The defalcations of the two women amounted to several million marks. Many small capitalists and some bigger ones, too, will lose their money. Even the firm's clerks and typewriters had invested their money in sums ranging from 100 to 5,000 marks in the business, and would not be convinced that it was all a swindle.

Frau Kupfer, who is described as handsome and of amiable personality, succeeded in hoodwinking the public for more than twenty months before she was found out. Among her victims were said to be a number of aristocrats and financiers who were frequent guests at the house on the Kaiserdamm.

JOHNSTON RESTORED TO TWELFTH REGIMENT

Special to The New York Times.

McALLEN, Texas, Jan. 23. — Colonel Gordon Johnston, who was removed from the command of the Twelfth New York Infantry on Dec. 1 by Major Gen. Frederick Funston at the request of Major Gen. O'Ryan, commanding the New York Division, following a charge by the regimental commander that the divisional commander had publicly insulted the colors of the unit, was returned to his command today, by order of General Funston.

It is not known at the headquarters of the New York brigade whether the War Department has acted on Colonel Johnston's resignation as regimental commander, and the Colonel himself has received no notification of acceptance or refusal. He said the command and his return came from the Southern Department.

Officers throughout the New York brigade regard the action of General Funston, a vindication of Colonel Johnston's stand in the controversy with General O'Ryan. It was generally known that the regular army officer wanted to quit the regiment because of friction that had lasted for several months. No information has been given out following the investigation by Lieut. Col. Eli Helmick, Inspector of the Southern Department, but it is known that the officer took confidential reports from officers of the Twelfth Regiment, and that he had a memorandum from General O'Ryan attacking the record of Colonel Johnston as commander of the Twelfth.

It is believed here that General Funston wishes to have an experienced officer take the Twelfth to New York. Colonel Johnston has been on inactive service at Fort Brown since his removal. A review of the regiment was held for the returning commander today.

SENATE FIGHT BEGINS TODAY

STONE TRIES TO BLOCK IT

FOREIGN OPINION AWAITED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Opportunity for debate on the President's speech with regard to American participation in a world league to guarantee peace will be afforded in the Senate tomorrow, when Senator Cummins will call up for consideration a resolution he offered today setting apart next Monday for the beginning of a full and free discussion of the President's address, in which, according to the terms of the resolution, the ninety-six members of the Senate would have a chance to participate to the extent of one hour each.

Opposition to the Cummins proposal developed immediately among the Democratic leaders of the Senate, and this increased to such an extent during the day that when Mr. Cummins seeks to call up the resolution tomorrow he is likely to be confronted by Democratic opposition to having any discussion whatever on the President's views concerning a World League for Peace. But, under the freedom of debate allowed in the Senate, Mr. Cummins at least will have his say as to the President's proposals.

Little comment came from the White House today concerning the address and the manner in which it was received here and abroad. The feeling there seems to be the same as that manifested among Democratic Senators—that the full significance and meaning of the President's suggestions will not be understood until after the opportunity to study them has been given. Matured opinions will be awaited by the Administration, and there appears to be a confident feeling that as the doctrines enunciated by the President sink into the consciousness of America and the rest of the world the verdict will be favorable.

It was pointed out today by a strong friend of the Administration that President Wilson's first essay into the fields of peace created an unfavorable impression in the British Isles and France, and even in Germany, but that after what the President had suggested was better understood the critical view in those countries had been modified. Some such outcome is evidently expected in the present instance. This hopefulness is not generally shared, however, for the impression is pronounced here that in the allied countries there will be keen resentment over the President's expression of hope that the peace to come will be a peace without victory—that is, a peace from a drawn war based on an equality of rights.

Allied Embassies Cautious.

But this impression, it should be said, does not agree with the impression which officials of allied embassies wish to have identified with their own. They are provoked because the idea has been created that they are angry over the proposals of the President. No such idea, it is explained, could rightly be deduced from any official expression given at any Entente diplomatic establishment or remarks made by any person connected with an Entente establishment in a position to speak authoritatively. They prefer that the Government and the people of the United States shall have the impression that, in spite of the disagreement between the President's advocacy of a "peace without victory," and the declaration of the Entente of intention to fight until they have brought the war to a victorious ending, the Entente nations regard the President's fundamentals for permanent peace as placing Germany and her partners on the defensive.

It is contended in certain allied quarters that the ideals set forth in the President's address are generally those of the Entente, and not those of the Central Powers, and it is not for the nations that are seeking to put an end to the menace of German militarism to criticise the President because the methods by which he would bring permanent peace do not coincide in all respects with those to be followed by the Entente, when the general motives and desires of the President and the Entente are the same.

Talk of this sort, while its downright genuineness may be doubted by those who believe that the President's address to the Senate will stir up considerable feeling in Germany, France, Russia, and Italy, serves to show a disposition on the part of the Entente representatives to take no course that would afford ground for offense by the United States. The good effect of the impression created in England and other Entente countries by the cordial manner in which the Entente answer to President Wilson's note of Dec. 18 was received in the United States has not faded.

Visitors at the White House today sought to get from the President an exact interpretation of this expression used in his Senate address: "If the peace presently made is to endure it must be a peace made secure by the

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—One of the things learned at the White House today was that President Wilson has not received from Berlin the terms upon which Germany will be willing to make peace with her enemies. Statements have been made here that the President had received the German terms in confidence, and it was even intimated that he had them when he wrote the address delivered to the Senate yesterday.

The impression sought to be created by this intimation was that the President in his address had merely paraphrased the German conditions for an ending of the war.

What was learned at the White House today showed that such statements were untrue and that the terms for permanent peace stated by the President were his own terms and not those of any belligerent Government.

PARIS IMPRESSED BY WILSON SPEECH

THINK HIM TOO IDEALISTIC

Press Is Sympathetic to the President's Aims, but Skeptical of Results.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Wednesday, Jan. 24.—President Wilson's address to the Senate produced here a profound impression. Surprise is the dominating note, mingled with a certain resentment regarding some passages.

Official circles consider the message a fine piece of academic reasoning, unhappily marred by the unwelcome phrase of "peace without victory." In this connection the feeling is that the President never disappoints his world audience without using some pregnant phrase which defeats his laudable objects. [illegible] is criticised with an unfortunate label such as "too proud to fight," as in this case "peace without victory."

The public generally expected Wilson's next move to be to insist on the Central Powers defining clearly the ends they had in view, which move would have been welcome. It is noticeable, however, that some governmental organs do not comment on the message unfavorably, especially The Figaro, in which Alfred Capus writes:

"President Wilson's address is a beautiful dream of peace and happiness for mankind—an ideal fabric whose grandeur we are ready to recognize. But this document regards as already solved all the problems which till now have tormented mankind. It takes no account of national interests, conflicts engaged, or different forms of government any more than the causes of the present sacrifices. Utopia as presented by the American statesman cannot shock our feelings.

"On the other hand, it violently conflicts with German mentality and the horrible pan-Germanist theory. For this reason, despite its chimerical form, we can consider it in the abstract as favorable to our conception of the pfesent war and the ends we are pursuing."

Saint Brice in The Journal judges the message more severely, remarking:

"The situation would appear inextricable if we did not realize how the pursuit of a fixed idea may lead astray. Wilson is haunted by the idea of inaugurating the golden age of universal brotherhood. Naturally, general disarmament is the basis of this system. The only thing making for the realization of this admirable conception is a new humanity. Does Wilson pretend to be able to change humanity?"

Jean Herbette in the Echo de Paris emphasizes the theoretical aspect of Wilson's message. He writes:

"Let us not be afraid to tell Wilson with the frankness which our sincere, unvarying friendship for the United States warrants, that the questions at issue are not political, but moral. What Wilson must grasp is the necessity of expiation. If the German people is ever destined to recover its conscience, which, in fact, would be a useful guarantee for peace, it will only be through suffering. Impunity for the aggressors would eternalize aggressions. As long as this moral law remains unsatisfied it is premature to follow the President of the United States in his developments regarding the freedom of the seas or the limitation of armaments. To be sure, his ideal is ours.

"War has killed too many Frenchmen for us not to hold the war in horror. But the only way to attain peace is to vanquish those who broke it. For the moment whoever desires justice to reign in the world has only one course open to him, namely, to declare himself against the assassins."

Humanité, the Socialist organ, after pointing out the aspects of Wilson's theory, which must conflict with German ideas, concludes:

"Wilson has put forward a great pacifist program, which reveals to the world the same high inspiration which prompted his note of Dec. 18. Despite all divergencies of opinion which may exist in the Entente countries, every impartial mind must recognize Wilson's conception as fundamentally akin to the ideas underlying the Allies' note."

"Wilson's Conceptions Ours."

The Petit Parisien, which generally reflects opinion of the lower middle classes throughout France, observes:

"None of Wilson's conceptions can shock us. They are our own and were so long before 1917. It is not we who will oppose them and it can only please us to see this thesis of liberty and justice eloquently upheld by Wilson. But what will Germany and Austria say to

HOSTILITY VOICED IN BRITISH PRESS

ASK FOR GERMANY'S TERMS

"Peace Without Victory" Chief Target, but Others of President's Proposals Assailed.

LONDON, Wednesday, Jan. 24.—With the exception of The Manchester Guardian and The Daily News, which are the only papers in Great Britain that can be classified as pacificatory in policy, the press gives the President's utterances an unfriendly reception and engages in much speculation over the meanings which, it is considered, may be concealed behind certain passages.

The evening newspapers yesterday devoted their front pages to the text of President Wilson's address, and comment from the morning papers of London and Paris under headings such as "President Wilson's Millennium," and "The Washington Sensation."

The Westminster Gazette asks whether, if President Wilson had suffered what the Entente Allies have, he would patiently have listened to a third party telling him he must be content to end the war without winning it and to forego penalties against the enemy who had sprung the war, torn up treaties and committed "unheard of crimes against humanity," and says: "We see no reply to these retorts."

The Westminster Gazette says it is a reasonable inference from the President's mention of the German intentions that "he knows something that we don't know," and concludes:

"Mr. Wilson has something further in view than rhetoric, and suggests that "his most practical step is to tell us what the German terms are, or if he does not know, to induce the Germans to disclose them. We shall then be able to attach a definite meaning to words and phrases that are now quite vague, and to discover whether the suggested 'peace without victory' is a peace which would leave our necessary objects unaccomplished, or 'merely a peace which stops short of crushing' the enemy in the sense of inflicting on him political extinction which we disavow.

Ideals Far from Militarism.

"The ideals which President Wilson sets before us are so remote from Prussian militarism that their realization necessarily carries with it extinction of German tyranny. His general idea of a world at peace with a reign of law established and all nationalities great and small living in freedom and security is such that he can only get what he wants if we at the same time get what we want.

"We frankly do not know what he means by 'freedom of the seas,' but in all other respects his aims are our aims and his ideals are our ideals."

The Manchester Guardian calls Mr. Wilson's address "a splendid policy, nobly expressed." The Guardian says:

"The speech in form was addressed to the Senate, but it equally concerns ourselves and our adversaries in the war. The President has no intention of taking any part in the actual negotiations of terms of peace; that he leaves wholly to the belligerents. He simply comes forward now to state in unmistakable terms, both for his own people and for the other people of the world, every one of whom is directly concerned, what kind of peace it is which he will consent to call upon his countrymen to approve and sustain."

After quoting the chief points in the President's speech, in regard to the condition on which peace must be based, The Guardian continues:

"It is a splendid policy, nobly expressed. How will it be received? By the peoples everywhere we cannot doubt joyfully; by men of good-will and enlightenment everywhere not less joyfully and with a clear perception that this is no vision of Utopia, but a well thought-out and justly framed scheme of a man in a great position and versed in great affairs."

Referring to the President's "noble concluding words" The Guardian says:

"These are words which will find an echo in many hearts and words are sometimes deeds."

Calls Speech "Astounding."

The Evening Standard refers to President Wilson's speech as astounding and, speaking of German claims of victory and the Emperor's letter to the King of Württemberg, continues:

"In other words, mediation is premature, and if persisted in could be interpreted only as a desire to help the party which already claims to have won. Moreover, it is not clear by what title, legal or moral, President Wilson assumes that he has some right to shape the destinies of the European continent."

Wilson's Speech Published In Berlin Yesterday Afternoon

BERLIN, Jan. 23.—James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador, transmitted to the Foreign Office today the text of President Wilson's speech in the United States Senate yesterday concerning participation by the United States in a league of peace.

The President's address was published in the Berlin newspapers this afternoon.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Jan. 24.—London liked neither President Wilson's note nor his speech to the United States Senate, but the disapproval manifested itself quite differently in the two cases. The note surprised and startled England; the speech to the Senate may give deeper offense and its effects may last longer, but it has caused far less consternation, judging from personal comment and newspaper editorials. And there is a much larger minority of opinion publicly favorable to the speech than there was to the note.

The speech seems to be regarded as a more or less internal American affair. It was not ostensibly an address to Europe, but increased importance attaches to it as a representative expression of majority opinion in America. At least, such is the belief here.

The note both wounded and offended English sensibilities. Certain passages in it were seized upon and misconstrued, and when a more just view prevailed there was reaction. The feeling today seemed more that of resignation. In the comment there was a note of regretful readjustment of opinion to the American attitude, a sort of revaluation of American friendship toward the Allies on a sliding scale downward.

As quotations from the press will show, the offending lance was tipped with a phrase "peace without victory." In "peace without victory" the President has coined a new expression that may "share honors with "too proud to fight" during the rest of the war discussion on this side of the Atlantic.

Thinks President Misunderstands.

Aside from the phrases to which unwarranted importance may be given, there is a deeper offense to the English in the implication that the belligerents all stand on the same footing. The vice of the whole discussion by the President from the English viewpoint lies in what is regarded as a complete misunderstanding of the moral objects for which the Allies are fighting. The British mind declines to entertain any consideration of the war based upon the moral equality of the Entente and the Teutons. The suggestion that the head of A great neutral nation may wish to keep himself in a position to maintain friendly relations with both sides if he is to play a useful part was not favorably received when offered as possibly the explanation today.

Professor Albert F. Pollard, the historian, said in an interview:

"President Wilson uses the term 'Peace without victory,' and says that is what the belligerents imply by their statements when they speak of the ultimate end of the war and assurances for the future. That is not my understanding of the attitude of either side, certainly not of the Allies. When we say we mean to crush Germany, of course we don't mean the German people, but we mean the German military machine that after a generation of preparation suddenly flung the whole of Europe into war.

"We are not going to stop at anything short of a conclusive peace, with victory at arms, and when we say that we mean we intend that the German military machine shall be crippled, for without it peace could not come. If we win this war we shall insist that Germany give back Alsace to France. Can that be done without a military victory, or can Serbia be restored, or Rumania, without a victory at arms?

"Realization of President Wilson's ideals of world peace must be based entirely upon a decisive victory. How can there be consent of the governed without free democracy? Would a Europe governed by the Hohenzollern regime be Europe under consent of the governed? If the Allies consented to a peace without victory it would be nothing more than a peace by compromise. That would only mean a fresh outbreak at a time when the nations who sought relief in compromise found themselves forced sooner or later into another conflict.

"In speaking of the freedom of the seas President Wilson does not distinguish between freedom in time of peace and in war. There is a great difference between the two. In peace times there is no question about the complete freedom of the seas, and all nations alike use the sea as they like. In peace time the sea automatically becomes free to all. But if freedom of the seas is applied the same way in war time it means nothing less than a plan to exclude Britain from Europe. For Britain's only real protection against aggressors in war time is her might upon the sea.

"The American people in viewing this conflict ought to recall the days of their civil war, and ask themselves what would have happened if President Lincoln had allowed that conflict to end without peace with victory."

Victory Essential to His Ideal.

J. L. Garvin, editor of The Observer, said:

"We all recognize that America has the right to say on what terms she will or will not become a chief guarantor of any future European peace. That guarantee, if given, would involve serious responsibility and have to be supported by both political parties in America, and not represent merely the policy of the Administration, but the settled, earnest appeal of the whole American people.

"The European problem is a difficult one even for us who live here and have given our lives to study it. Statements of exalted principle for more than 100 years have been as familiar on our continent as on yours, but they have not yet been able to help toward a stable settlement of actual facts. After all their sacrifices the Allies have the right to say what are the only terms compatible with their honor and safety that they can accept. President Wilson seeks to build a lofty palace of international idealism, but I firmly believe that without the effectual victory of the Allies that palace would be founded on sand, and never could be based on bedrock.

"We are bound to seek peace with victory, without vengeful pride or lust of conquest. Nothing but the victory of those whose appeals for peace were deliberately rejected in 1914 can finally overthrow the German war greed and war system and above all the war makers who forced this conflict on the world. It must be recalled that but for the Allies' strength in arms there would be no earthly chance for President Wilson's ideals today and no chance for them in the immediate future if Germany could now succeed in her purpose to dictate premature negotiations to escape actual defeat."

Sir Hamar Greenwood, M. P., said:

"In my opinion, based on a recent visit to America, President Wilson's bold and original speech represents the average American's view of this and all European wars. The average American considers himself removed from the European view and sees the war from a viewpoint diametrically opposed to the traditions and cruel necessities of European countries. Every European country has got to prepare to fight for its rights, as most of them are now doing. The American sees no occasion to prepare or to be alarmed about a conflict that is raging across the water.

"In my opinion, Germany is the great aggressor in this war and nothing but a decisive victory over the German Empire would give any relief to the countries of Europe or secure for the future any chance of that world-wide peace which is President Wilson's dream. Americans know nothing of the menacing shadow of a great power like Germany that for more than a generation has kept Europe on the rack. The time may come when America's self is attacked. Then will come Americans then will think exactly as the British people think now."

"It is one thing to crush a dynasty and caste and another thing to talk about crushing a people. The Allies do not want to wipe out the German race, but Prussian militarism. President Wilson suggests that democracy is coming into its own after this war. That is precisely what we are fighting for, and we do not intend to let up until we have accomplished democracy's triumph."

Josiah C. Wedgwood, M. P., in a letter to The Daily Chronicle, says:

"Two points might well be emphasized: President Wilson's speech to the Senate: First, that it is directed not to the belligerents but to the American people, and secondly, that the President is asking Americans to make a greater sacrifice for humanity. He is asking them to guarantee the peace and give up their safety and isolation should the peace conditions be such as a democratic people can support.

"However much The Daily Chronicle may deprecate a peace without victory, we may all recognize the real grandeur of the Anglo-England spirit which puts above self and safety the liberties of alien peoples."

Speech a Great Surprise.

LONDON, Wednesday, Jan. 24.—President Wilson's address to the United States Senate has given the British Government and public a surprise as electrifying as his mediatory note to the belligerents.

Public men interviewed begin with courteous tributes to the President's good intentions, and end by supporting Great Britain's measures. While the Government cannot make any direct reply to a communication from the President to the United States Senate, there are certain to be discussions in Parliament. The usages of the House of Lords give even greater latitude for addresses on any topic any member wishes to discuss than those of the American Senate, while the question paper of the House of Commons furnishes an equally good opportunity for the advancement of personal views.

It is already foreshadowed by members of the Commons that a discussion will be insisted upon when Parliament reassembles, and speeches from members of the present and the late Cabinet are expected. Possible action by the American Congress on committing the nation to membership in an international peace league is awaited with the greatest interest. Both David Lloyd George, in his historic maiden speech as Prime Minister, and Viscount Grey, when Minister for Foreign Affairs, strongly declared that membership in such a league without obligations to enforce its decrees by arms would be useless.

The effect of President Wilson's policy on the status of the Monroe Doctrine is discussed with equal interest. Several British publicists, notably L. J. Maxse, editor of The National Review, suggested recently that Great Britain is entitled to a weighty voice in any international movements in the American hemisphere because of the growing importance of Canada as one of the foremost nations of that hemisphere.

The voice of part of the "silent masses" upon the war was heard in the Labor Party conference at Manchester today, when it indorsed the action of the labor members of Parliament who entered the War Cabinet by a vote of more than six to one. Most of the small substratum of sentiment favoring a conciliatory policy toward the Central Empires is to be found in labor unionists and a small group of intellectuals.

The Central News says that undoubtedly the manifesto has developed a situation of extreme delicacy. It adds:

"Whether or not it was expected by the allied diplomats in London, it came as a bombshell to those outside the official circle, and no amount of President Wilson's 'plain English' will convince the rank and file of the Members of Parliament or the man in the street that it has no direct bearing on the immediate facts of the war.

"It is not doing the President an injustice to say that whatever may have been the lofty motives of his speech, the average British Member of Parliament and his constituents regard it as an ill-timed interference in matters which can only concern the United States when the time comes for a settlement of the basis of international peace. The extreme opinion, which, in fairness, must be given is that the President is selling the allied cause to Germany. The calmer view urges a dignified protest to the President to keep out of the ring till the great round is over."

In well-informed governmental circles the prevailing view appears to take the following general course:

It is considered correct that the President's statement and notes have brought nearer a definite discussion of peace, mainly because the Entente reply gave specific terms. His reference to the power of the United States guaranteeing future peace is also recognized as in line with the Entente view that any plan to indorse the peace of the future involves the power to enforce the peace agreement. It is also pointed out that the President's statement that American participation is guarantees for future peace depends on the character of the terms is in accordance with Foreign Secretary Balfour's note.

The President's statement that "We have no voice in determining the terms" is welcomed in these circles as the first definite declaration that the United States does not expect to take part in the congress which frames the terms of peace. While this view, it was said, had long been accepted among the belligerents, it was believed in some quarters that America desired a voice in determining the terms.

President Wilson's question as to whether the present struggle is one for a "just and secure peace or only for a new balance of power" leads to the comment that there is another element in addition to these. This is described as the spirit of national indignation against Germany, similar to the feeling a man has when he finds a burglar in his room and succeeds in overpowering him. The President's reference to "peace without victory" and a "peace between equals" is also felt to be open to some misconstruction.

The reference to the freedom of the seas is also considered open to misconstruction, as the Entente view is that its ships are the chief defenders of the free movement of merchant commerce.

Northcliffe Points to Mexico.

Lord Northcliffe, owner of The Times, The Daily Mail, and other newspapers, said yesterday in an interview:

"I have expressed my opinions in my newspapers this morning. I might add that our democracy is excessively puzzled as to why President Wilson does not begin operations by the pacification of little Mexico.

"We are all for the limitation of armaments. We had not much more of an army than the United States before the war, and had offered the Germans to reduce our invincible navy, without effect. Our democracy is all for peace, but the horrors of Armenia, Serbia, and Belgium and the enslavement of French and Belgian women now taking place do not encourage with us an atmosphere such as that of the White House.

"Americans who have seen these gigantic tragedies talk a good deal about Lincoln. The presence of Americans in the allied armies here, who know the facts, is some proof that the President's laudable attitude is not shared by those who are close to the situation.

"I regard the President's misunderstanding of the situation as due to German propaganda and geographical distance."

Britain's Mistakes at Sea.

Carlyon W. Bellairs, who is one of the leading authorities on naval affairs on the floor of the House of Commons, was asked regarding his impression of President Wilson's words relative to the freedom of the seas. He read over the passage referred to, and said:

"These are serious words. They are asking England to make the greatest sacrifice in the realm of possibility, and she could not do so without the most absolute guarantees. The only possible interpretation of these words means taking from England the one weapon which enabled her to become what she is, and remain so in the face of enemies.

"I am convinced that if we had used our naval weapon as Lincoln used it, when within the month of the outbreak of the war he declared a blockade of the enemy coasts and began the process of starvation—we would have finished the war a year ago, and that, too, with far less international friction than has been the case by gradual acceleration of the blockade. We were too slow in the use of mines. Mines are the trenches of the sea, and the belligerent who first uses them in strategic and tactical positions has the same advantage as an army in trenches. We might, for example, have mined our way into Heligoland Bight or the Baltic.

"I see no more reason why the navy should not cut off supplies passing from neutral to enemy than that the German Army should interfere and cut off supplies overland from Holland to France. If new international laws are to be on the ground of strict justice, those laws should apply alike on land and sea.

"How would the American civil war have been affected by the application of the Wilson principle of freedom of the seas? Surely it would have meant the right of every body to trade with the Confederacy, and what would have been the result?

"There are two ways of viewing President Wilson's appeal—sentimental and practical. From the sentimental side his theories meet with universal response, especially from Englishmen, who, after all, are of kindred blood and mind, and who, also, are altruists at heart. But from the practical side I see no way out of the present situation but a victory peace."

President's Ideals Britain's Too.

Professor Gilbert Murray, Regius Professor of Greek at Oxford University, said:

"President Wilson's address is most important and welcome. Of course the settlement he requires expresses an ideal to which we should approximate rather than to which we must comply. There will be need for much definition and perhaps some compromise before the requirements can be translated into fact.

"We consider a victory necessary; but neither the people nor the Government of Great Britain has ever demanded or desired to impose peace by victory, in the sense which the President deprecates. Our aim is a victory of international rights and the defeat of militarism."

Percy Alden, a member of Parliament and President of the Mayflower Club, said:

"We cannot help admiring the tone and temper of the President's speech, although we may not agree with the position he takes up. My own view is that it results from a conviction on his part that the war may, and probably will, end in a stalemate, and that he desires with all his heart that it may be possible to stave off the slaughter and destruction of a Spring offensive. The only conceivable hope of achieving his purpose is to give to the world, if he has them, the German peace terms."

Baron Sydenham, former Chairman of the British Air Board, observed:

"The strength of President Wilson's address lies in the high ideal by which it was inspired. He sees, as in a vision, a new world in which there shall be no preparation for war, but a solid union of all peoples acting in the common interest. That is an ideal in which all right-thinking peoples of all countries can share. How it can be achieved must remain to be determined when peace returns. Unless Germany is defeated, not one of Mr. Wilson's demands can be fulfilled, and his roseate vision will fade into oblivion. Can President Wilson really believe the Union could have been maintained if a victory had been denied the Federal armies?"

Socialist Leader Resents "Lecture."

Henry Hyndman, a leader of Socialism in England and Chairman of the Socialist Party, said:

"As a Socialist I am opposed to war, but as an Englishman I feel that my country is serving the cause of civilization when it helps to prevent Prussian militarism overrunning Europe and crushing democracy. This task is unfinished. Therefore I believe that some of President Wilson's ideas, while excellent, are impossible of realization at the present time.

"America did nothing to prevent this terrible catastrophe. It has taken no part in the struggle; yet President Wilson, its spokesman, stands like a doctrinaire lecturing us. I object to the tone of his speech. It is as if we were inferior animals and needed some one to co-ordinate our doings for us.

"I am satisfied the Allies have a great duty to mankind to perform and that they cannot be dissuaded from their purpose by lectures from those who fail to understand the situation on this side of the world. However, I believe England, France, and the United States are the hope of the white race, and despite President Wilson's objections to alliances, that an alliance of these three great democracies—England may soon become a republic—will prove the foundation stone to perpetual world peace."

VOTE FOR PEACE CONGRESS.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—According to the Copenhagen Politiken, as quoted in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch, the Socialist party of Norway has adopted a resolution supporting the American proposal that an international Socialist congress be summoned to meet at The Hague to prepare the way for peace.

The Norwegian Socialists suggested that the congress be held at one of the Scandinavian capitals. They also adopted a protest against the deportation of Belgians.

BRITISH LABORITES CHEER FOR WILSON

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Jan. 24.—The Labor Party at its annual conference at Manchester yesterday again endorsed the action of its members of Parliament in supporting the Government by a card vote of 1,849,000 votes to 807,000. There were about 700 delegates present, including Mr. Henderson, who is a member of the War Cabinet and five other M. P.'s.

G. J. Wardle, M. P., the President, set the tone of the conference in a patriotic speech wherein he said he was convinced there could have been only one greater tragedy than the war, and that would have been for Great Britain to have kept out of it. Labor, he said, had given its co-operation during the war spontaneously because it clearly recognized the fact that the issues of the war were fundamental to liberty, to civilization and the free development of all peoples.

Passing on to deal with the recent overtures for peace put forward by the Central Powers, Wardle said:

"However desirable peace may be—and what sane man does not desire it at the earliest possible moment?—it would not, in my opinion, be possible at the present time to secure a peace which would not contain within itself far graver dangers, far more terrible possibilities of misery and slaughter, far greater risks for the future than the continuance of the struggle. He is no peace maker, either in private or in public life, who refuses to recognise the existence of the real causes of difference and who would patch up the quarrel while these causes remain. Germany has not renounced her war aims, and until she does no peace is possible."

An allusion by Wardle to President Wilson roused the pacifist minority to indulge in a prolonged demonstration. The delegates, reinforced by women in the galleries, rose up cheering, gesticulating and waving their handkerchiefs.

"Three cheers for Wilson!" were called for and responded to, and by way of anti-climax a delegate suggested three cheers more should be given "for the land of dollars and dimes!" Another delegate called out:

"If Wilson's too proud to fight why should he want to interfere with our finishing the job?"

The Times says:

"The demonstration was so sudden and noisy that one was tempted to suspect its spontaneity and the fact that a number of onlookers in galleries vociferously led the cheering only strengthened the suspicion. The real voice of the conference was the shouts which applauded the declaration that until Germany had renounced her war aims no peace was possible."

Mr. Henderson, in the course of his speech, said:

"Any impression going out from this conference that labor is weakening in its determination to prosecute this war to a successful conclusion is going to be a message of disencouragement to the Allied cause and will be inconsistent with the decision you adopted last year by an enormous majority."

This was greeted with loud and enthusiastic cheering.

The votes of the minority came mainly from supporters of the Independent Labor Party, which The Morning Post accuses of conducting an anti-patriotic campaign designed to stop the war at any cost.

"Those who were ever seriously troubled by the malignant activities of Philip Snowden, Ramsay MacDonald, and their brother anti-Nationalists," says The Post, "may rest assured. If those gentlemen represent anybody else but themselves it is clearly not organised labor. The whole world, including President Wilson, will henceforth have no illusions of that point."

NO GERMAN MILITARY CASTE

But a Great National Army, Says Helfferich, Which Will Win.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Confidence in the victory of the Central Powers was expressed by speakers at a dinner given in Berlin to the Presidents of the Parliaments of the Teutonic powers, according to a Berlin dispatch to Reuter's by way of Amsterdam. Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg and several of his colleagues were present at the dinner. Dr. Karl Helfferich, German Secretary of the Interior, referring to the Entente's refusal of the peace offer, said:

"Our enemies must learn to understand that among us there is no military caste, but a great national army which, despite all, will hold on and be victorious by virtue of the divine right of existence of our peoples and their inexhaustible strength and readiness for sacrifice."

Dr. J. Sylvester, President of the Austrian lower house, said:

"The peace message which sprang forth from the idea that the strong man must yield was useless. In the coming fight, which will be exceedingly hard, sanguinary, and full of sacrifices, we will be faithful to our heroic sons at the front."

Bulgars to Demand Macedonia.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—In an interview with the Lokal-Anzeiger of Berlin, the President of the Bulgarian Parliament, says an Exchange Telegraph Company dispatch from Copenhagen, declared that Bulgaria's peace demands were the whole of Dobrudja to the Danube, parts of Macedonia, all of the Morava River, (Serbia,) and Monastir.

Poles Express Gratitude by Wire.

The Polish National Defense Committee, in convention here, sent to President Wilson yesterday a memorial expressing "the greatest joy and the deepest gratitude" because of his reference to an independent Poland in his speech before the Senate.

them? Once again they are nailed to the wall."

The Matin remarks in the same connection:

"We are entirely in accord with Mr. Wilson's principles, but hold until further notice that it is necessary to impose them with force on a certain section of humanity, for it would be a delusion to believe the latter would be led to admit them by force of persuasion."

Gustave Hervé in the Victoire sounds a similar note, observing:

"Mr. President, if you can by force of persuasion bring the Hapsburgs of Vienna to relinquish from their claws 30,000,000 Slavs or Latins, and the Hohenzollerns of Berlin to loosen their grip on Alsace-Lorraine, Prussian Poland and Danish Schleswig this would be the greatest victory human eloquence and philosophy have ever achieved in this world. But as the Allies have lost faith in miracles, President Wilson will certainly not take it amiss if they undertake to realize his dream of international justice, which is also their own, in adding a little artillery to his good words."

The Gaulois, which has royalistic tendencies, says:

"President Wilson's words will not fall into a void. The question is to know how to interpret them."

L'Oeuvre has for a top page squib the following:

"Peace must be a peace without victory, says President Wilson."

And underneath:

The Journal des Debats remarks:

"This move is just as extraordinary in form as in its basic conception. Wilson insists on the rôle which is incumbent upon the American nation in the conclusion of peace and the establishment of a world status. But peace without victory would be a peace in which the aggressors would be treated on the same footing as the victims. President Wilson's principles of justice and morality ought to prevent a wish of this sort."

Thinks Wilson Sees No Realities.

Stephen Pichon, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, speaking concerning President Wilson's address to the Senate, said:

"President Wilson's message contains part of our own program for a democratic peace, the liberation of nations as viewed from the French republican standpoint. When I was Minister of Foreign Affairs I gave instructions to our envoy to The Hague Peace Conference which assured France's adherence to the suggestions of the United States for organized peace in Europe, but already at that time we were met by the refusal of the German envoys. France under past and present Governments cannot be accused of ever having failed to respond to the humanitarian ideas as expressed in Mr. Wilson's message which are common to both republics. However, this message takes us by surprise.

"President Wilson sees matters from a very lofty standpoint, but from his pinnacle he seems to have lost sight of realities. In his first note, for instance, Mr. Wilson asked the belligerents to define their war ends, and we expected that in the next note Mr. Wilson would repeat the question, and force Germany to disclose her designs and admit the reasons for which she threw Europe into the horrors of war. But this time the President employs roundabout means by addressing the Senate after defining the program. Instead of asking the belligerents the reasons for the conflict, he exposes the ends which an American peace has in view. Instead of continuing useful interrogation, he outlines in advance the basis for ideal humanity.

"In tracing this picture of pacified Europe he mentions specifically the reconstruction of Poland, which is also one of the Allies' objects, but he makes no mention of the Czecho-Slavs, Alsace-Lorraine. This omission seems to indicate that President Wilson from dual standpoint does not see things with sufficient clearness. In spite of the enormous sacrifices France has undergone, the heroic fortitude with which she supports the war she never desired, and the fact that she cannot renounce just recompense for her generous efforts.

"A patched-up peace is impossible. I shall long be dead before mankind consents to forego the just reward for the bloodshed in a righteous cause. President Wilson's conceptions float in the distant future and are not applicable to the cruel realities of the present. We appreciate the theoretical generosity of his action, but it is vague and offers neither for us nor for our enemies even the outline of a possible solution."

FRENCH LAWMAKERS PUZZLED BY SPEECH

Public Men Admire President's Aspirations but Avoid Direct Praise of His Step.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—Leading Frenchmen reserve public expression of their judgment upon President Wilson's address to the Senate until they have further studied its contents. The Associated Press requested various Ministers and statesmen outside the Cabinet for opinions, but without exception they refused to be quoted.

In the lobby of the Chamber of Deputies there was to be found, mixed with admiration for the aspirations of President Wilson, considerable wonderment among the Deputies as to what precisely the President desires the belligerents to do now, except to give assent, in their public opinion, to the principles enunciated by him, which are designated noble and which have always been those of France.

A good many members of the French Parliament were puzzled on the first reading as to whether the address was timely or whether it was intended to induce Germany to bring forward her terms for comparison with those of the Allies; in which case, some of the Deputies say, it would have been supposed that the American Government with direct methods would have asked Germany specifically for her terms.

The French newspapers comment freely on the President's speech, some of them praising the President's idealism and some of them treating it as not relevent to the present situation of the belligerents.

"In exalted terms," says the Temps, "President Wilson develops a peaceful charter for the humanity of tomorrow. He invokes the principles of the French Revolution, proclaimed more than a century ago, in a noble dream of universal fraternity. It will be interesting to see the reception Germany will give to this new message from President Wilson, and if she will formulate her conditions of peace."

Peace such as the President outlines, says the Temps, would require Germany, Austria, and Turkey to admit that Governments receive their powers from the consent of the governed, and adds:

"The Allies for twenty-eight months have poured out their blood without measure for the liberty of nations. Notwithstanding their sufferings they refuse to think of peace which leaves untouched the arrogance of the oppressors. Germany proclaims herself victorious; she insists she has been attacked. By mendacity and atrocities she insists upon imposing respect for her force. Her conduct of the war in daily defiance of right and the laws of humanity. Is it by persuasion and by the prospect of contributing to the welfare of humanity that President Wilson hopes to transform predatory empires into peaceful lambs.

"The message of President Wilson merits all our attention, by reason of its generosity and the ideal he pursues. It will be read with sympathy because it translates the feelings of a friendly nation which does not always take into account certain problems for which humanity has not yet found a solution. The ideas which he expresses with eloquence are very dear to those which we are defending by our arms.

"The new manifestation of the President will bring America and the Allies probably nearer together, but it will overthrow certainly the real German conceptions of the war. It may contribute to clear up all neutral minds as to the German soul and demonstrate to them that only by the victory of the Allies would the door be opened for a stable peace—such a one as America wishes for and all people who love liberty."

"It would be ungracious in Frenchmen," says La Liberté, "whose history abounds in generous enterprises for the liberation of peoples, if we should not give homage to the high thought that guides President Wilson. Our fathers across the ages have fought for ideals—in the Middle Ages in crusading for the Holy Sepulchre in the name of Christ, and during the revolution in making war, not for conquest, but for liberation.

"Whenever a people has sought independence a powerful sigh has shaken France, and she has raised herself to help aid. This should not be forgotten on the other side of the Atlantic. The generous dreams of Mr. Wilson have been ours for a long time. They are still ours."

RUSSIANS APPROVE.

First Impression of Wilson Speech Is Favorable.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 23, (via London.)—Although Russian public opinion has not had time to digest fully President Wilson's speech in the Senate, the first impression is decidedly favorable.

The first paragraph of the speech, comparing the general reply of the Central Powers with the definite answer of the Entente to the President's first note, was received with particular satisfaction. Such expressions of opinion as have been voiced thus far indicate the tone of the remainder of the note will be indorsed in Russia, while decision is received in regard to some of the concrete points mentioned.

All the morning papers print the full text of the speech, but the only press comment comes from the Novoe Vremya, which in the main withholds opinion until later. This newspaper says:

"At the beginning President Wilson saw no difference between our aims and those of our enemies, but now he does, and the mere fact he admits this makes a proper deduction. The general principle which he considers necessary for the United States coincides exactly with the foundation for peace as outlined in our reply to the Allies' note.

"He declares a final peace in Europe must be such as to forever avoid a repetition of the present catastrophe. That is precisely the aim for which we are bearing the heavy burden of this war."

The Novoe Vremya continues that the declaration regarding peace is in accordance with the ideas of fairness and freedom which lie at the basis of the life of the American people, that it expresses the point of view of the Allies also, but that it is not the point of view of the Central Powers. It concludes:

"A firm peace and international justice—these are the aim for which we are shedding our blood. Germany's aim is German domination and the humiliation before her of all the weak peoples. The difference of these aims has now become quite clear to the head of the American Republic."

APPROVED BY DUTCH PAPERS.

One Thinks He Included German Provinces in "Free Poland."

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The Amsterdam Handelsblad, quoted in a Reuter dispatch from that place, considers President Wilson's address "ideal, beautiful, and calculated to create a lasting peace, provided it were accepted by all." The paper, however, greatly doubts whether this ideal can be realized.

The Amsterdam Telegraaf is of the opinion that President Wilson's program was inspired by the Entente note and declares it difficult to assume when the President mentions Poland he refers only to Russian Poland. The paper approves the reference to the Monroe Doctrine and believes that the President not only alludes to the nations which heretofore have figured on the map of Europe, but wants the doctrine applied also to nations over which Austria and Germany now rule.

The Nieuws van den Dag also dwells on the passage relating to Poland, and recalls how Germany has given clearly to understand that Prussian Poland will never be united to an independent Polish kingdom.

BRYAN SEES OBJECTION TO PRESIDENT'S PLAN

Says American People Will Not Consent to Let Europe Control Their Army and Navy.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 23.—"The President's message is a wonderfully eloquent appeal to the nations at war," William Jennings Bryan said in an interview here today. "In so far as the President's message suggests terms of agreement, it is entirely sound and reflects what I believe to be an almost unanimous sentiment, but I dissent entirely from the proposition that this nation should join in a movement to effect peace in Europe.

"If I know the sentiment of the American people, it is inconceivable that they should be willing to put the American army and navy at the command of an international council, which would necessarily be controlled by European nations, and allow that council to decide for us when we would go to war.

"I have more faith in our people to help them by example than I have in our country to help them by indorsing the European plan of relying upon force and terrorism.

"In the President's appeal to them he presents the philosophy of brotherhood and co-operation, which is inconsistent with the proposition that it be backed up by a larger display of force. In other words, the President has sown wheat and tares together. I hope that the Senate will approve of the wheat and reject the tares."

Hannis Taylor Assails the President's Peace Proposal.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Hannis Taylor, formerly Minister to Spain, in commenting today upon President Wilson's proposal to enforce peace throughout the world by means of a universal peace league, said:

"Byron once declared that every seven years the people of Great Britain are seized with a paroxysm of insanity, and that so long as it lasts they are liable to do or say almost anything. That was the most charitable explanation people in this country have listened to President Wilson's re-statement in a very extreme form, of an exploded and Utopian dream now more than two centuries old, is proof conclusive that such periodic attacks of national dementia are not confined to the other side of the Atlantic.

"The only new thought President Wilson has ventured to utter he has seen fit to cast in the form of an Irish bull, the most perfect one ever made. If he only had a finer sense of humor, we could understand his motive when he speaks of extending the Monroe Doctrine (a local and peculiar system which cannot exist outside of this hemisphere) to the whole world. And yet in this contradiction of terms, in this logically impossible utterance, nobody can fail to perceive the President's deadly hostility to a peculiarly American, emphatically Democratic doctrine, which emanated, as all the world should know, from the brain and pen of Jefferson. To everything that has emanated from Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic Party, Mr. Wilson seems to cherish an implacable opposition.

"The most cruel estimate ever made of Jefferson's political character is contained in Mr. Wilson's history of the American people. Jefferson abolished the King's speech and established the Presidential message. After the lapse of a century Mr. Wilson has abolished the Presidential message and reinstated the King's speech. Not content with that, Mr. Wilson is determined to crush the brain child that Jefferson loved most, the Monroe Doctrine, which Jefferson wrote at Monroe's express request, and to which Monroe contributed nothing but his name. Jefferson wrote: 'Our first and fundamental maxim should be never to entangle ourselves in the broils of Europe. Our second, never to suffer Europe to intermeddle with cisatlantic affairs.'

"Mr. Wilson says that is all rank heresy; that it is our first and Christian duty 'to entangle ourselves in the broils of Europe,' and thus invite Europe to intermeddle with cisatlantic affairs. If we follow him we will be involved in a state of perpetual war."

SEES A CHASTENED WILSON.

In an editorial landing the President's address to the Senate on peace terms, The New Yorker Staats-Zeitung said yesterday afternoon:

"We cannot imagine that Woodrow Wilson would have proclaimed the 'new Monroe Doctrine of the whole world,' which would do away with the American Monroe Doctrine in the New World if he had not secretly received certain assurances from all the nations concerned that he would not be merely talking to the winds.

"We, too, line up with this purified Wilson, who, above all, desires the freedom of the seas, which is Germany's greatest war aim; who wants an independent Poland, such as Germany and Austria-Hungary have already created—who favors a free Ireland, from which the life marrow will no longer be sucked by British oppression; who wants a free, a genuinely neutral Belgium, not one secretly attached to England, such as Germany is ready to set up."

The New Yorker Volkszeitung said:

"We have already emphasized how Utopian, in our opinion, is the plan for a 'Peace League' of the powers. But, putting this misgiving aside, we must admit that a progressive man addresses us in this speech.

George Sylvester Viereck refers in an editorial in The Fatherland to Mr. Wilson's speech as a "Sermon on the Mount," as a "declaration of peace," and as "the greatest event since the declaration of war," adding: "The President's address once more opens the door of peace to the Allies before the Teutonic forces deliver their last crushing blow."

what he had done "for justice and humanity, for the rights of the weak or the honor of the strong, that you should now presume to school us in the mighty conflict to which we are committed, and from which you most carefully have held aloof," says he did not protest against the invasion of Belgium, and wrote a note when the Cunard liner Lusitania was torpedoed. Continuing, the newspaper says:

"And then you wrote a second note and then a third, because you were seeking the suffrage of electors in whose ears the last cries of their drowning countrymen were smothered beneath the tinkle of piling dollars.

"You did not dare resent the piracy and murder, and now, forsooth, we who have given our best and bravest by the hundred thousand and treasure by the thousand millions to the world war must at your bidding lay down our arms and dream with you your foolish dream of peace."

The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"Peace presents no attraction for us so long as it would leave the perjured enemy with fleets and armies ready to spring again as soon as we appeared to be off our guard. Victory is for all of the Allies the first essential of safety. After that we can talk about permanent suppression of war at our leisure."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Jan. 24.—The Morning Post, in an editorial on President Wilson's address to the American Senate, says:

"Between the serene vision of Mr. Wilson and the blood-darkened prospect in which the Allies are groping there yawns a gulf deep and wide as the difference between reality and what the President calls 'soft concealments.' He affects, and doubtless sincerely, to 'uncover realities.' They are the realities of the Old World.

"But among Wilson's aspirations which we may admire, though without precedents, is the desirable proposition that 'intimately concerns their country above all other countries' is the proposal to establish the freedom of the seas. The President is careful not to define that expression, but if he means that he desires so to alter the law of nations as to confer upon neutrals and belligerents equal privileges which they do not and cannot use on land and at the same time to impose limitations upon naval strength as well as upon its use, we tell Wilson in plain terms that if Britain and her allies will have none of it.

"This country has earned the right to speak on this matter, for what but the Royal Navy has charted and lighted and kept secure the oceans of the world for generations. The British Empire came by the sea, lives by the sea, and will continue to use the sea in accordance with the law of the sea and none other.

"And now having listened so long and with so much interest to Wilson's instructive essay on the arts of peace, fruitful in the world, may we respectfully beg leave to go on with the war?"

Thinks Plan Embarrassing to Foes.

The Daily Telegraph says:

"It would be easy to take a slighting tone toward the whole of the speech delivered by the President in the Senate, but it would, we think, be equally injudicious and narrow-minded to dismiss the address in its entirety with comment of that sort. Serious objection has to be taken to both the phraseology and the line of argument in certain passages, which cannot, one supposes, have been expected to pass unchallenged. Some of the objections appear already to have been welcomed by the German-American element as favoring our enemies' hopes. But President Wilson obviously did not take the very unusual course of addressing the Senate without careful consideration or without a definite purpose in view, and no profound study of the speech is needed to establish the fact that the purpose of it is one with which it is impossible for any reasonable being to quarrel.

"Apart from certain passages which arouse a very natural feeling of impatience among us, President Wilson lays down nothing which has not been virtually accepted by the Allies in the statement of their war aims, made to him. On the other hand, he lays down nothing which our enemies can concede without a total abandonment of the policy and temper which is responsible for this war. Without consenting to such a reorganization of Europe as we proposed and they have furiously denounced.

"How far can the President demand first? Complete equality of rights as between all nations, great and small, which side is fighting for that? The second principle is that Governments derive all their just powers from consent of the governed, is the principle represented by Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Turkey? Is it in the enslaved populations held down by them, that we find that 'tranquility of spirit and sense of justice, freedom and right' without which President considers no peace can be stable?

"But when we find Wilson demanding the freedom of the seas as 'a sine qua non of peace equality and co-operation, we seem to get into the region of catchwords. When we are told that 'free in peace?' If the reference is to the law and practice of maritime war, we wait to hear what is proposed to the allied Governments and to that which ordered the sinking of the Lusitania.

"Again, when we turn to the most salient passage of the speech, remembering what the world owes to Germany, we are bewildered to read that 'the United States must employ its force in and in peace without victory.' There must be nothing to leave a sting, a resentment, a bitter memory'; otherwise, there can be no stable peace. We have met before with people who adopted this attitude toward the retaliation of crime.

"They were amiable souls who took to themselves the name of philosophic anarchists. We will venture to remind President Wilson that in the earlier phase of his political career he enjoyed power as the Governor of a State of reprieving or pardoning convicted offenders. If he habitually used his opportunities to consider the penalty go unpunished, we never heard of it.

"There is one question which we have a right to ask. Supposing the League of Peace to be in being. Supposing aggressive power to defy it and attack one of its members and supposing even a league to move against that power and disarm it by force, as contemplated by President Wilson, would that be a case of 'peace without victory?'

"If the Allies are fighting to disarm the Central Empires because there is no 'covenant of co-operative peace' in existence as yet. There never will be until predatory militarism is beaten in the sight of mankind and cursed in the execration of the peoples who have hitherto allowed it to control their national policy."

PUBLIC MEN DIFFER ON WILSON ADDRESS

Paul Fuller Says "Peace Without Victory" Means Allies Must Prevail.

SCHIFF FORESEES NEW ERA

President's Idea Not Merely Utopian —"Butting In Again," Perkins Asserts.

New York men who are prominent in public life yesterday expressed divergent opinions of President Wilson's address to the Senate, the comment showing various interpretations of the document. Paul Fuller, international lawyer, of 2 Rector Street, said:

"There are two points of view from which the President's address seem of great interest. First, it marks a new epoch in our foreign affairs and a virtual reversal of the policy to which we have adhered since the Farewell Address of Washington. For some time past many thinking men here and abroad have realized that the time was rapidly approaching when we could not even pretend to continue a policy of aloofness. Until yesterday, however, there has been no official act or any expression from any one occupying a high official position that the time for such a change of policy had arrived.

"The second and more concrete point of interest is what seems upon a cursory examination to be a contradiction in the address itself. I refer first to the statement that it must be a peace without victory. When put into juxtaposition to certain other expressions in the address, an examination of these will, I think, result in a broader interpretation of the 'peace without victory' phrase than seems to have been accorded it so far.

Freedom of Life Is Issue.

"The President said: 'Mankind is looking now for freedom of life, not for equipoises of power.' Surely the Entente Allies are fighting for freedom of life and the Central powers for equipoises of power.

"The President further said: 'No peace can last, or ought to last, which does not recognize and accept the principle that Governments derive all their just powers from the consent of the governed, and that no right anywhere exists to hand people about from sovereignty to sovereignty as if they were property.' The Entente Allies are fighting against a state of affairs which permits the handing of people from sovereignty to sovereignty as has been the case in Serbia, Belgium, and other places, not to speak of something even worse—the slavery of whites by whites as shown by the deportation of the Belgians.

"The President further said: 'May I not add that I hope and believe that I am, in effect, speaking for liberals and friends of humanity in every nation and of every program of liberty? I would fain believe that I am speaking for the silent mass of mankind everywhere who have as yet had the place or opportunity to speak their real hearts out concerning the death and ruin they see to have come already upon the persons and the homes they hold most dear.'

Thoughts of the French.

"The President is not only speaking for the silent mass of mankind, but he expresses the thoughts, desires, and aspirations of the French people, for which they have been and still are willing to sacrifice life's most precious possessions.

"In the light of these very clear and specific statements, as clear, perhaps, as those contained in the last Entente notes, what is the meaning of 'a peace without victory'? Surely it cannot be interpreted to mean that any lasting peace can exist until the Entente Allies have accomplished what they are fighting for, namely, the absolute elimination of the monstrous system by which individuals or groups of individuals can plunge a large proportion of the civilized world into a death struggle. I take it that 'peace without a victory' means a peace not founded upon the annihilation or crushing of any one people, and this, I take it is not the object for which the Allies are now fighting. Any other interpretation seems to me narrow, illogical, and contradictory to the high ideals of the President's address."

Jacob H. Schiff expressed the belief that hardly any of the President's suggestions could be ignored if permanent peace were to be established after the present war.

"The President's address to the Senate yesterday," as had to be expected, is calling forth all sort of comment both at home and abroad, many passing it over as Utopian," Mr. Schiff said.

Schiff Predicts a New Era.

"Should it, however, in coming to conclusions upon the President's unique address—which will for all time to come constitute one of the greatest state papers in the history of nations—not be borne in mind that the entire world, in consequence of the present war, is about to enter into a new era, more momentous, perhaps, in its changes in comparison with conditions as they existed prior to the war, than the changes wrought by the French Revolution?

"This, no doubt, is what the President recognizes, and though the vision which he displays is far-reaching, what he has said in his great address to the Senate is by no means visionary. In my opinion it will not be very long before it will become generally recognized that hardly any of the stipulations the President suggests can be ignored if permanent peace is to be established at the end of the present war, and if the latter is not to turn into the beginning of a series of titanic conflicts, as has recently been prophesied by an eminent speaker.

"The President's impressive words should as they no doubt will be earnestly pondered over both by the people in belligerent countries as well as at home, for they point the way to conditions under which national life throughout the world will likely have to be re-established in the new era, the dawn of which is upon us."

"It is evident," George W. Perkins said, "that, not content with butting into Mexico, with all its dire consequences, the President now proposes to butt into Europe's affairs. We may expect the same result."

Morris Hillquit, Socialist, calls the address a courageous act, saying:

"I believe that he has taken the only position that a far-sighted statesman, unwarped by international interests, could take. His speech was a courageous act, and it will have an excellent effect upon the fortunes of the war. As far as the complete terms outlined are concerned, they are no mere dream of an idealist, but they are thoroughly practical. They are the only terms upon which the warring nations may be forced to unite in the long run."

Chauncey M. Depew said he had thought about the address a great deal, and was a good deal puzzled.

"It is the most momentous utterance ever made by a President of the United States, not only because of the dramatic way in which it was made, but because the present tragic conditions in the world have never been equaled," Mr. Depew said. "This last utterance, if it came from Mr. Wilson while he was President of a great university, might be regarded as an academic discussion, but the President now speaks with tremendous authority.

"He says that no peace can be lasting with a victory. That means, if it means anything, that no concession will be made except those which are absolutely voluntary on both sides. Belgium, then, must go unrequited, because Germany will not voluntarily return the enormous sums levied upon her.

"The President says that there should be no obstruction in nations reaching the sea. That would mean that the Dardanelles would be open to Russia and that Antwerp and the Belgian coast would be retained by Germany.

"Without a victory each of the belligerents goes back to where it was before the war, with a settlement which may be called 'quits,' after $50,000,000,000 of national debt and 20,000,000 lives lost."

WANTS NO DICTATED TERMS.

New Republic's View of Phrase "Peace Without Victory."

The New Republic will say editorially in this week's issue:

"For the moment the President is bent on creating the atmosphere of negotiation. In this effort he has had to say one thing which it was not easy to say. He had to tell the world that America could not share in a settlement which was dictated by the victor to the vanquished. He had to say that only a peace negotiated in a spirit of give and take would be stable enough to justify America in assuming the risks he was proposing. In making that point he used a phrase which will hurt deeply many whose support is required. He said that it must be a peace without victory.

"It was an idea that had to be expressed, costly as it may be. So long as the people of the world believe that a lasting peace can be secured by dictation rather than by negotiation, the world will be where it has always been, at the mercy of a teetering balance of power. Peace has never been secured in Europe by that method and never will be, and the allied spokesmen have generally recognized this. They have told us that their object was to prevent Germany from winning anything by her aggression. They wanted her to go home with a sense of futility. They wanted to show that war does not pay—that nothing can be accomplished by it. The war will not end, and President Wilson, we take it, would not wish it to end, till that demonstration was complete. If the Germans think they are offering peace now because their armies are victorious, then the war will have to go on till the military situation changes.

SENATE TO DEBATE WILSON'S ADDRESS

organized major forces of mankind." The President smilingly told them that what was meant by "the organized major forces of mankind" was a question to be determined by the international concert that would meet after the war.

This expression has caused some comment here. One construction of it is that it means that the President is advocating merely a League to Insure Peace and that does not contemplate the employment of armed force to prevent nations from engaging in hostilities. Generally, however, it is supposed that the President had in mind when he wrote his address the use of armies and navies to compel recalcitrant members of the Peace League to refrain from going to war.

The Cummins Resolution.

Senator Cummins's resolution will probably lead tomorrow to debate over the President's address. It calls for a general Senate discussion of the issues in national policy outlined by the President, giving each member not more than one hour in which to state his views. The resolution reads:

Whereas, On the 22d day of January, 1917, the President of the United States appeared in person before the Senate and announced certain views touching the policy the United States should adopt and pursue respecting the principles upon which the belligerent powers of Europe should make peace, and respecting the manner in which the peace so made should be permanently maintained; and

Whereas, The President declared in his communication as follows: "I have sought this opportunity to address you, because I thought I owed it to you, as the counsel associated with me in the final determination of our international obligations, to disclose to you without reserve the thought and purpose that have been taking form in my mind in regard to the duty of our Government in the days to come, when it will be necessary to lay afresh and upon a new plan the foundations of a peace among the nations;" and

Whereas, It is impossible for the Senate to take official action upon these grave matters until the treaties creating such new duties and defining this new plan have been made by the President, and submitted to the Senate for ratification or rejection; and

Whereas, It was the obvious object of the address to invite a free and frank expression from the members of the Senate for guidance in his arduous work; and

Whereas, The Proposals presented to this body involve the integrity of the nation and the peace of the world, and it is our bounden duty to advise the President of our individual opinions concerning the undertaking upon which the country is asked to embark; therefore, be it

Resolved, That on Monday, the 29th day of January, immediately after the conclusion of the routine morning business, the said address of the President shall be laid before the Senate for discussion, and its consideration shall continue to the exclusion of all other business until each Senator shall have had an opportunity to speak thereon; but no Senator shall speak more than once nor more than one hour.

Senator Stone, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, immediately moved that the resolution be referred to his committee, but Senator Cummins objected, and according to the rules it was permitted to lie over until tomorrow, when it will be called up at the conclusion of the morning business. The Democratic leaders will immediately move to have it sent to committee, but consideration of the motion will leave open to the Republicans a chance to express their views on the President's address itself.

There is little doubt tonight that several will avail themselves of the privilege. While it is probable that none will precipitate set speeches on the program outlined by the President, several are known to be so bitterly opposed to the idea of a League to Enforce Peace or any suggestion of the modification of the Monroe Doctrine that they will insist on speaking before the resolution is finally disposed of. Senator Lodge and Senator Borah denounced the main ideas advocated by Mr. Wilson in speeches made at the time the Hitchcock resolution endorsing the President's note to the belligerent powers was introduced.

There is no question that the Cummins resolution will be killed or shelved in committee. The Democrats are opposed to any more debate on the President's foreign policy than they can possibly avoid. There is a general feeling that the President did not wish it, and that he had no intention of starting a party debate when he went to the Capitol. The Democratic leaders feel also that a protracted airing of personal views at this time is undesirable. They believe that both they and the country should have time to digest what the President has said before they attempt to express final opinions of it, and that as Mr. Wilson has not brought up anything that calls for immediate decision or action, the time is not ripe for formal consideration of his proposals.

In a sense this represents the Republican view as well. Many Republican leaders have avoided any open expression of opinion, and said today that they would volunteer no opposition on their own initiative, even though they disagreed with Mr. Wilson's views. If consideration of the Cummins resolution brings the issue to a point, they will insist on having their say about it, but they have planned no concerted action to express disapproval. They feel that there is no particular use of it now, since no immediate action can be taken.

Senator Cummins said that he intended to continue his remarks in support of his resolution to consideration of the resolution itself, and did not expect to launch out into a discussion of the President's speech. Although he was strongly opposed to the idea of an international league to enforce peace. He believed, he said, that a grave question ought to have the most serious and deliberate consideration.

"If the President is sincere in his references to the Senate's association with him in the conduct of foreign affairs, as I assume he is," he said, "surely he would be the first to wish us to discuss his plan with the utmost freedom."

Waste of Time, Says Stone.

Senator Stone placed his opposition to the Cummins resolution chiefly on the ground of lack of time.

"We are in serious danger of an extra session now," he said, "and I can see no use exhausting a week talking over the speech, as the resolution demands. I haven't the slightest personal objection to having it discussed, so far as that goes, and I suppose we can't avoid some sporadic speeches on it, but there can be no sense whatever in setting aside a special period for talk about it and letting our regular business go by the board.

"The President has not asked the Senate to take any action on his plans, and so far as I know doesn't want it to do anything about them. I would consider an extended debate on the speech now a complete waste of time."

There was little general comment on the speech at the Capitol today. Congress seemed to be spending the day recovering its balance after the first outburst of feeling following the shock it received yesterday. The dominant feeling of satisfaction on the Democratic side of the Senate remained, while the Republicans and the few Democrats who are opposed to the President's proposals were little inclined to discuss them at length.

There was a general tendency on both sides to await the verdict of the American public and of the belligerent nations before making a final decision about the probable effects of the address. Several Senators of both parties spoke of the reception which had been given to the President's note of Dec. 18, remarking that opinion of its ultimate result had changed materially within the period between its first dispatch and the receipt of the Allies' reply, and that there was danger of being premature in offering judgment on the present message until its significance had been made clear.

No Further Step Planned.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—So far as any further step in the movement for peace is concerned, the President is understood to feel that there is nothing to be done at this time. He has submitted to the Senate, and through American diplomats abroad, to the world, the foundations on which he considers a lasting peace must be based, and the conditions under which he believes the United States would join in a world league to preserve peace in the future. Now he waits for the verdict, not only from the nations at war, but from his own countrymen, who he knows hold divided opinions on the subject.

In diplomatic quarters there was a tendency to believe that some of the belligerent nations would find a way to comment formally on the President's address. Even if this is not done, the opinions of the Governments undoubtedly will reach Washington informally through diplomatic channels.

Early press comment from Europe was viewed by the Administration with the utmost interest, and that of the French papers particularly was in general more appreciative and sympathetic than had been expected. The French comment was construed as meaning that France fully understood the President's motives, even while dubious of the immediate practicability of his proposals. The English press comment was disappointing at first glance, as officials felt there had been an undue criticism of President Wilson himself instead of a serious study of his address.

More deliberate consideration appeared to have a distinctly mollifying effect upon some of the Entente diplomats here. There was a more general disposition among them today to accord credit to the President for high and altruistic intentions, in spite of an undercurrent of criticism of the impracticability of the vast program because of its failure to take into account the elements of passion, greed, and revenge that would affect all efforts to arrange a permanent peace.

The bitterness of certain comment in this country and the announced opposition of W. J. Bryan was expected by the Administration. It was largely because of the realization of the great opposition to be encountered at home, it is understood, that the President decided to throw the whole matter into public discussion in the belief that a decision on it must be reached if America is to take its proper place in the world.

Abroad equally is the value of this discussion seen. The President's speech is regarded as a long step in the demecratisation of diplomacy and as an appeal, not only to the rulers, but fully as much to the people of Europe.

It was stated authoritatively today that the President had not committed himself to any particular means of guaranteeing peace, once secured, and believed that the details of such guarantees properly should be worked out in a conference. He does not feel himself committed as to whether such guarantees shall be by moral, economic, or military pressure.

Officials took pains, too, to deny suggestions that the United States was attempting to impose a peace or lay conditions of a peace. The President, they point out, laid down certain broad principles simply on the ground, as he said, that "it is right that this Government should frankly formulate the conditions upon which it would feel justified in asking our people to approve its formal and solemn adherence to a league of peace."

TURKS QUIT KUT TRENCHES.

But Report Inflicting Heavy Loss on Attacking British Forces.

BERLIN, Jan. 23. (by Wireless to Sayville.)—Heavy losses were suffered by the British in an attack on an evacuated Turkish position east of Kut-el-Amara, on the Tigris, on the morning of Jan. 20, Turkish Army Headquarters announces. The statement reads:

East of Kut-el-Amara the hostile fleet and heavy artillery shelled during the entire night of the 19th the position previously evacuated by us. The following morning a hostile infantry brigade attacked this position and was fired at by us from the flanks, suffering heavy losses.

On the Persian front a hostile detachment attacked near Daulatabad, (south of Hamadan.) It was repulsed.

the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives.

This concession on the part of the Governing Committee of the Exchange was not made until after a controversy, the climax of which came when notice was served on President Henry G. S. Noble of the Exchange by Attorney Sherman Whipple that subpoenas would be issued for every broker in the city unless the information was supplied voluntarily.

The first request, sweeping in its nature, was made upon President Noble when he concluded his testimony about operations on the Exchange, "short selling," and "pools" at the morning session. Chairman Robert L. Henry of the Rules Committee and Counsel Whipple at that time demanded that the records from Dec. 10 to 23 of all brokers connected with the Exchange be turned over to the committee itself. Mr. Noble said he would see what he could do, and would try to get the members of the Governing Committee of the Exchange together at 3 o'clock.

At this point Congressman Campbell of Kansas made a statement which led many to believe that the inquiry might be carried back to earlier dates if it were found that the trail led to other leaks.

"Let it be understood," he said, "that this does not limit the operations of our committee to the dates mentioned, and that the committee went into power on March 4, 1915."

"That, of course," said Chairman Henry, "is understood."

None of the members would discuss the point at the time, but it was openly hinted that, should the committee have time or be continued after March 4, it might broaden the scope of its investigation to take in other violent changes in stock market values.

Mr. Noble listened to this without a word and then hurried away to assemble the governors.

At 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon he returned, accompanied by Walter F. Taylor, counsel for the Exchange.

"The Governing Committee, after a thorough discussion," said Mr. Noble, "has postponed action on the matter and instructed the President and counsel of the Exchange to come down and state to the committee that the production of the information would not only impose a great hardship on a large number of houses who are not mixed up in this matter, but also it does not appear to them that they have the power to enforce the request. They wanted to ask if it could not be modified."

Whipple Presses His Point.

He explained that the Clearing House sheets would show the heavy "short sellers," and that after this information was obtained arrangement could be made to get at the books of the firms involved.

"I did not understand," interrupted Attorney Whipple, "that the question of power is involved. The question is whether they will make the request to the brokers and turn over to the committee such responses as are received. If the board will make the request, the committee will determine how to enforce it, if there is not prompt compliance."

Representative Chiperfield of Illinois interrupted to say in a determined voice that "compliance is wanted more than excuses." He added: "Nothing unreasonable has been asked for."

"The whole future of the hearing is to be shaped by the action of the Governing Committee of the Exchange," said he. "I don't see how we are going to proceed until the question is settled. I think it was most unfortunate that the Governing Committee did not remain in session."

Mr. Taylor explained that the Governing Committee hesitated to ask the members to make public the names of clients voluntarily, as, should any harm come to such clients, the brokers would be in an unfortunate position.

Chairman Henry took up the debate, and said that he had been in communication by telegraph with Mr. Noble before the committee came here, and as a result of their exchange of messages had expected that the information would be given without protest. That was why no subpoenas had been issued for Mr. Noble and other officials of the Exchange, he said.

The compromise finally was offered by Mr. Whipple. He thought it would be unwise, he said, to leave any of the firms outside the examination of records, as in that way the person who had profited by a "leak," if such a leak occurred, might escape. He suggested, however, that the information from the brokerage houses be put in sealed envelopes and sent to the Chairman of the Committee on Clearing House of the Exchange, so that it would be available for examination if the necessity arose.

"In this way," he said, "unnecessary publicity would be avoided. We are not trying to pry into the private affairs of any one."

Mr. Noble had this put down in writing, and shortly before 5 o'clock left the inquiry room, saying he would attempt to get the governing committee together again. The resolutions given above were the result of the second meeting.

Noble Reticent Under Queries.

The fight by the Stock Exchange to prevent the granting of the demand shared with the other developments in almost as much interest and importance to the members. While it had been hinted by some of those on the Rules Committee that the inquiry would not involve a general investigation of Stock Exchange methods, these intentions apparently were quickly put aside. Mr. Whipple was at times openly endeavoring to make further research into "short sales and "manipulation," spurred by the obvious reticence of President Noble.

Mr. Noble and Samuel F. Streit, Chairman of the Exchange's Committee on Clearing House were the only witnesses called. While Mr. Whipple did most of the questioning members of the committee frequently broke in. Congressman William S. Bennet went so far as to ask Mr. Streit what, in his opinion as a broker, the effect on the stock market would be if short selling were abolished.

"It would reduce the activities and the volume of transactions on the Exchange," he replied.

"Would it put the Exchange out of business?"

"No."

"The Exchange would still continue as a substantial factor in the life of the country?"

"Yes."

Still another hint of future Congressional action came when Mr. Noble was on the stand telling about the manipulation of stock. Mr. Whipple asked him why no steps had been taken by the Conduct Committee of the Exchange to discipline members or obtain evidence which would make it possible to discipline them, as a result of the many stories published in reputable newspapers about pools to depress stocks. Getting no satisfactory reply, he asked if Congressional action in that direction would be unwise.

"Not if you have the proof," he replied.

The morning session of the hearing did not attract a large crowd, and there were less than a dozen spectators in the civil service examination room on the third floor. The only woman present was the wife of Congressman Patten. At the hearings in Washington there had been scores at every session. The arrangements were like those of a courtroom, and the spectators were ordered back of a railing. Attorney Whipple, on reaching the room, pushed back an easy leather chair which had been furnished for him and selected a small wooden one.

The line of action which Mr. Whipple pursued showed that he hoped by disclosing the names of those who had "sold short" heavily to get at the men who profited by a "leak" if a "leak" occurred. He outlined the intentions of the committee in its New York sessions in these words:

"It has been claimed that large sums of money were won and lost as a result of stock market operations, due, it is alleged, to advance information from Washington, and probably from some person in authority at Washington. The inquiry will resolve itself into the following:

"What transactions occurred in the stock market here.

"What losses were sustained, and by whom.

"Also, and what is more important, the large profits made, and by whom.

"And, finally, whether these profits were made by an individual or set of individuals in concerted action and by advance information from those in official life at Washington. The first and fundamental question to be asked is, What were the activities on the New York Stock Exchange?

"We will also endeavor to discover the names of the brokers who are said to be responsible for these transactions, and to find out from them who made large profits or sustained losses, and after we have learned that, the committee will be in a position to determine those persons who have sources of information in Washington."

Then Mr. Noble was called, and Mr. Whipple began his examination by seeking general information about the Exchange and the A B C of stock transactions. Mr. Streit drew up a chair alongside the President of the Exchange, and they were permitted to confer frequently. Mr. Noble said that the membership of the Exchange was limited to 1,100 seats, representing something more than 500 brokerage houses.

The word "seat" was used in connection with membership, he said, because in the old days the members sat around tables.

"Not much," replied Mr. Noble.

The witness went into some detail about the manner in which seats were obtained, and explained that the Exchange was incorporated and resembled a club in that its members were proposed for membership and passed upon by a committee and could be blackballed.

The Clearing House, he said, received from each firm connected with the Exchange each day a sheet which recorded all of its transactions. Between 85 and 90 per cent. of the transactions passed through the Clearing House.

"Are these records accessible to the committee?" asked Mr. Whipple.

"To your committee," returned the witness, "yes."

There followed a long explanation of the difference between speculative stocks and those considered as investments because they were not subject to wide fluctuations. Of the former, he said, of some stocks he considered "speculative," the witness named United States Steel, Anaconda Copper, Willys-Overland, the marines, and some of the industrials. He considered Lackawanna as an investment stock. He admitted that the greatest amount of trading was in speculative securities.

"Don't you think it possible to manipulate deals on the Exchange?" asked Mr. Whipple. The witness fenced on this question, asserting that he did not know just what Mr. Whipple meant.

"Well," said the attorney, "I hope you will give this prayerful thought, as I may ask more later." Mr. Whipple then turned to "short selling."

Didn't Trace Talk of Leak.

"A short sale," said Mr. Noble, "is contracting to deliver something you hope to be able to obtain cheaper."

Q.—Have you not heard of gentlemen getting together for a concerted move to force down stocks at the time of some, let us call it, unfavorable news?

A.—You want to know if during my experience in the Stock Exchange I have had personal knowledge of any conspiracy to depress stocks. I have no direct personal knowledge.

Q.—Have any investigations been made in the face of the many stories in responsible newspapers from time to time to determine whether there was such concerted effort?

Mr. Noble replied that there had been investigations by the Business Conduct Committee to determine whether "wash sales" had taken place. This Mr. Whipple accepted as an evasion of his question, and finally got an assertion from Mr. Noble that there had been no investigation to determine the truth of newspaper stories.

The question of obtaining the records in the possession of the Clearing House and statements from the brokers was then taken up. Mr. Whipple said that the committee wanted records between Dec. 10 and Dec. 23, which would show the names of the customers, how their accounts stood day by day, and whether they were long or short and how much. It also wanted, he said, records of all transactions, including loans of stocks.

At the opening of the afternoon session Mr. Noble appeared in the courtroom, seeking the opportunity to make a correction in his early testimony about the ethical side of manipulation to depress stocks. Turning to Mr. Whipple, he said:

"In your question this morning you spoke about a pool to sell stock short. In answering I overlooked the matter of a combination or conspiracy to put stocks down artificially. If that was what you meant, I do not approve. I do not approve of any concerted action in the nature of a conspiracy to depress prices."

Q.—Have you any way to punish members who engage in such a pool?

A.—Only in case it is the act of one of our members.

Q.—Did you not say that you had seen much about such things in the newspapers?

A.—Yes.

Mr. Whipple then drew from the witness that no action to obtain evidence against any member of the Exchange had been taken despite the stories published.

Mr. Streit was called upon to explain in detail the workings of the Clearing House, and it developed that Mr. Whipple was anxious to get at the books of the brokers because he could not obtain definite information in all instances from the Clearing House sheets or obtain from them the names of the clients of the various firms. Then the counsel switched into the question of "short sales." He elicited the information that the professional operators were the ones who generally "sold short" and not the small operators.

Mr. Streit said also that speculation would be greatly lessened if "short sales" were abolished. Next came the information that it was the practice of brokers with the consent of their customers to loan stocks bought on margin to other brokers who, in turn, used them for short sale transactions. Thus it was explained the stock of the customer who hopes to profit by a rising market could become a weapon in the hands of the "short sale" speculator who hopes for a falling market.

"That is," said Mr. Whipple, "a man may furnish the petard on which he is hoist?"

"That is possible," Mr. Streit replied.

When the inquiry is resumed at 10 o'clock this morning Mr. Streit will be recalled.

Safety for Over Half a Billion Passengers

The Steel Car Route

For years the Pennsylvania Railroad System has been conducting an energetic campaign of safety.

Only all-steel cars have been built. Efficiency tests have been established; safety-first expositions have been held for the education and instruction of trainmen; safety committees have been organized; and over 120,000 safety text-books have been printed and distributed to employees.

It is the logical result of this safety movement that during the past three years over half a billion passengers—553,890,063—more than five times the total population of the United States—have been carried over the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad System without the loss of the life of a single passenger in a train accident. On the Pennsylvania Railroad east of Pittsburgh a perfect record for four years has been made, during which a total of 616,626,957 passengers were safely carried.

This remarkable result is gratifying and encouraging, and with the continued co-operation of our faithful employees, to whom great credit is due, we hope to maintain the record we have established.

REPLY OF GERMANY ON DEPORTATIONS

FORCED LABOR DEFENDED

Berlin Holds Law Was Observed in Belgium and Invites Embassy Inspection of Deported Workers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—A detailed defense of the action of the German Government in deporting Belgians from their own country into Germany for forced labor is undertaken in Germany's reply to the American protest against such deportations, the text of which became known here today. The reply was dispatched from Berlin on Dec. 12.

The substance of it was made public in dispatches from Berlin at that time.

In the official reply it is contended that the measures taken by the German Government are absolutely in accordance with principles of international law, but that there were gross violations of international law by Russia in the deportation to Siberia of the German population from parts of Eastern Prussia occupied by hostile troops. As set forth in this note, the German argument is that unemployment in Belgium, "caused by the British policy of isolation," forced the German Government to take measures to relieve the situation.

If mistakes were made, the note asserts, they were isolated, and if, after considering this explanation, the United States Government attaches importance to the matter, a member of the American Embassy in Berlin will be permitted by personal visit to ascertain the conditions under which the deported Belgian workmen are living. It has been alleged that many of these deported Belgians have been forced to work in munition factories and on other military works in Germany. This is denied by the German Government, which has informed the United States Government that "employments to which a hostile population cannot be coerced, in accordance with international law, are, of course, excluded."

Text of the German Reply.

The text of the German reply is as follows:

"The Government of the United States has protested against the compulsory employment for work of the Belgian unemployed, which step was taken from the point of view that these measures are in contravention of human principles and of international practice as to the treatment of the population of occupied territories. The German Government thinks that the Government of the United States of America has been incorrectly informed about the cause and the execution of the measures taken, and it, therefore, considers it appropriate to first explain the facts in detail.

"In Belgium, unemployment since a considerable time has been extending in a perplexing way among the industrial workingmen. This problem of unemployment has been caused by the British policy of isolation, which has cut off Belgian industry from the importation of raw materials and from the exportation of manufactured goods, thus bringing most of the Belgian work to a standstill. By this measure almost half of the workingmen of the Belgian factories, numbering, in round figures, altogether more than 1,200,000, were deprived of the possibility of earning a living, and many more than 500,000 Belgians, who formerly supported themselves by industrial work, were thus made dependent upon public relief. Adding the members of the families of these people, the number increases threefold, to 1,500,000, in round figures.

"From the standpoint of Belgian economic life, for which the unemployed form a heavy burden; from the standpoint of public order and public morals, which are most dangerously affected by the general unemployment and its accompanying consequences, this situation makes it extremely desirable and urgent that efficient measures for improvement should be taken. This necessity has been recognized and has been pointed out also by fair-minded Belgians since a long time.

"Under such conditions the Governor General at Brussels on May 15, 1916, issued an order by which persons enjoying public relief and declining without sensible reasons to accept or to continue work corresponding to their abilities will have confinement or coercive labor imposed on them. The Belgian industries being in a depressed state, it was impossible to secure work for all unemployed, or at least employment in Belgium herself.

"The only thing possible, therefore, was to assign to them work in Germany, where a large number of Belgian workingmen had already voluntarily accepted work, were perfectly fed, receiving high wages and enjoying a far-reaching liberty of movement. For those workingmen who do not support their families, however, coercive labor was introduced. These measures are completely in accordance with international law. According to Paragraph 43 of The Hague regulations for land warfare, an issue complementary orders.

"The maintenance of public order doubtless implies that able-bodied persons, as far as they live on public charity and by their idleness become a public calamity and a nuisance, should be held to work. The order has been carried out under the observance of all possible considerations and without harshness. If isolated "mistakes have been made in the selection of the persons sent to Germany, and if, especially, the measure has been extended also to persons to whom the conditions of the order of May 15, 1916, do not apply, this has been caused by the fact that the Belgian authorities frequently failed to co-operate in the drawing up of the lists of unemployed or by their reporting in an incorrect way. Care has been taken that such mistakes are made good as quickly as possible, for, above all, it is to be insisted upon that only such persons are sent to Germany who receive public support, who find no work in Belgium, and who refuse the work offered to them in Germany. The unemployed are being sent from the central receiving places, which have been established at Altengrabow, Guben, Cassel, Meschede, Muenster, Koslin, and Wittenberg, to their working places, where they are to be employed in agricultural and industrial establishments.

"Employments to which a hostile population cannot be coerced, in accordance with international law, are, of course, excluded. If the Government of the United States attaches importance to it a member of its embassy in Berlin will be permitted with pleasure to inform himself by a personal visit about the conditions under which these persons are living.

"The German Government greatly deplores that, by a slandering press campaign of her enemies, the conditions as explained above have been completely distorted in the United States. The German Government would likewise extremely deplore, not the least in the interest of the Belgian population, if by these distortions the highly beneficial action of the Relief Committee should be hampered.

"The German Government, finally, feels obliged to point out the fact that the deportation of the German population from parts of Germany and from German colonies occupied by hostile troops, especially the deportation of women, children, and old persons from Eastern Prussia to Siberia, as far as it is known here, has not given the neutral States an inducement to take steps against the respective Governments similar to those now being taken against Germany. At all events, there can be no doubt that the enemy measures mentioned were gross violations of the laws of humanity and of the rules of international law, while, after the explanations given, the measures of the German Government are absolutely in accordance with these principles."

TELLS DEPORTATION STORY.

German Plot to Enslave 300,000 Belgians, Passelecque Says.

In spite of the representations of the German Government in its recent note, many persons believe that the German purpose in deporting the Belgian workmen is to press-gang them into the military organization of the empire. The story of what he calls a plot which threatens to enslave 300,000 persons is related by Fernand Passelecque in a book just published in Paris, Les Deportations Belges d'après la Lumière des Documents Allemands."

The author cites the military regulations of the Gesetz und Verordnungsblatt de Bruxelles and the order of General von Hushne requiring identification cards from all classes, and says "the kidnapping of the population" is really a part of the scheme of Dr. Rathenau, President of the "Elektrizitäts-Gesellschaft," to terrify and impoverish the country and prevent its industries from competing with the German. The whole thing is illegal, according to the book, a barbarous measure that cannot be justified.

At first, it is said, appeal was made for voluntary labor, official notices offering jobs on public enterprises to men without work. But the Belgians had many reasons to be suspicious. Many had returned from Holland to their homes with the idea that they would not be employed on military works or any form of forced labor. They were skeptical as to the justification of the military commandant that it was the blockade that forced him to relieve the distress of the unemployed by seizing the inhabitants and sending them into districts of Germany.

The poor were unattracted by the appeal for workers; the Belgians preferred suffering at home to migrating, with other hardships chosen by their taskmasters. The German authorities then decided to use compulsion. The streets were placarded with a proclamation in which the military commandant attributed the regulations to the blockade, which made provisioning of the people more and more difficult.

ASK ACTION ON BELGIUM.

Columbia Faculty Want President to Demand Return of Deported.

Members of the Faculty of Columbia University have addressed to President Wilson this appeal on behalf of the Belgians, the name of President Butler heading the list of 430 signatures attached to the document:

"To the President of the United States: We, the undersigned, members of the Faculties of Columbia University in the City of New York, appeal to you on behalf of the suffering people of Belgium.

"Unspeakable disasters have fallen upon this people, guilty of no crime save that of defending their honor with their blood, overwhelmed by the armed forces of a nation pledged to protect them, devasted by a warfare whose relentless cruelty has no parallel in modern history, robbed of the resources on which their industrial life depended, and impoverished by crushing indemnities levied by force of arms, the brave people of unhappy Belgium have long since been reduced to a state of piteous helplessness. Their suffering and their weakness command our deep compassion, even as their heroism compels our admiration.

"The crowning atrocity is now in the way of execution. Tens of thousands of the noncombatant populace, many of them induced to return to Belgium by pledges of protection, are rudely torn from their families and hurried into virtual slavery within the German Empire. In the presence of so hideous a wrong, perpetrated upon a helpless and innocent people, the great American nation cannot remain silent or inactive.

"We therefore call upon you to demand of the German Government, in the name of humanity, an immediate cessation of the deportation of Belgian citizens, and the prompt return to their homes of all victims of this practice, and we pledge to you our earnest support in whatever action may be necessary to secure full compliance with these just demands."

SEEK AMERICAN AID TO REBUILD BELGIUM

Financial Arrangements with Bankers Here for Purchases After the War Expected.

The American Industrial Commission, which was sent to France by the American Manufacturers' Export Association, issued the second installment of its report yesterday. The installment deals with the restoration of Belgium after the war and includes a letter addressed to the commission, of which W. W. Nichols is the President, by the Belgian Chamber of Commerce concerning the rehabilitation of the devastated country.

Only an approximate estimate can be made, the report states, of what will be needed in the way of capital. The commission says "it seems evident that a very large part of what is imperatively needed, including financial support, will have to come from the United States."

The letter from the Belgian Chamber of Commerce, in Paris, which is dated Oct. 17, reads in part:

"We have, in a report to the Belgian Government about six months ago, called special attention to the following points:

"1. The financial and industrial situation of the principal Belgian industries after the departure of the invaders.

"2. Their most urgent needs in raw material for the manufactured articles they are wont to produce.

"3. The labor indispensable for the reconstruction of the workshops and other necessary buildings.

"4. The reassortment of machine and other tools and plants which have, to such an enormous extent, been arbitrarily carried away, stolen, or destroyed by the enemy.

"In concluding that report we remarked that the United States would be the country where there appear to be the best chances of finding what will be necessary, as regards machinery, tools, and raw materials drawn from other parts of the American continents, besides the adequate financial resources to carry out such a program while the war lasts, and possibly after its conclusion.

"The resolutions of our chamber suggested an appeal to the principal associations of the great industries of your country, in order to help Belgium to resume its industrial and commercial position after the war.

"It is believed, from conversations with American bankers of high standing, that financial arrangements can be made in such a manner as will practically insure such purchases to be equivalent to cash transactions, thus doing away with any addition to the manufacturers' net prices for remuneration on account of financing and commission charges. The specifications of the various raw materials, machinery, tools, &c., would, we expect, be drawn up by our Government, or their nominees.

"We shall transmit all the foregoing, with the other information given us, to the Belgian Government."

Gibbons Sends $10,000 to Belgians.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 23.—Cardinal Gibbons announced today at a meeting in the interest of the Belgians that on Monday he sent a check for $10,000 to the American Committee in London which is handling the relief work, and that he expected to follow it within the next few weeks with checks for $40,000. He said the money was coming from all parts of the United States in answer to the appeal of Pope Benedict. Included in the $10,000 was $1,000 which the Pope sent to the Cardinal for the fund.

DESTROYERS MEET IN TWO BATTLES

of Ymuiden. This vessel, which may be the only survivor of the German flotilla, apparently was undamaged.

No word of the battle reached the mainland until about 9:30 this morning, when a small Dutch sailing boat named the Eems came into port. The men on board the Eems said that while fishing at a point a little to the north of Ymuiden their vessel was hailed by a German torpedo boat in a very badly damaged condition. This was the V-69.

The German boat asked the Captain of the Eems to take off ten of the seriously wounded German sailors. All of them were terribly injured, one having an arm and shoulder shot away, and another having the lower part of his body smashed.

The part taken by the V-69 in the battle was told in fragmentary sentences by the wounded, who frequently voiced their disgust of the war and sickness of the whole business. They said they were taken by surprise, knowing nothing of the nearness of the British fleet until a shot struck the bridge, shattering it to pieces and killing the commander and two other officers who were standing near him. The Captain had both legs cut off and died in a few minutes.

A second shot struck close to the quick-firing gun, killing the entire gun crew of five men. A third shot disabled the steering gear, and a fourth raked the vessel amidships, tearing up the ironwork and throwing the after funnel almost down on the deck.

After being thus disabled, the V-69 turned her head toward Holland, and fell in with the Eems when it was obvious that she could not make a German port or German waters.

She was seen at dawn, lying almost helpless, about five miles out to sea. Dutch tugs and torpedo vessels went out at full speed to render help and bring her in. In all she had ten men dead and fifteen wounded, but some of the wounded were not expected to live more than a few hours.

If the Zeebrugge flotilla consisted of twelve vessels there cannot be many others left, for the wounded say that seven of their boats certainly were sunk. Thus only five others are not accounted for. Of these five, one is in Ymuiden, another is said to be coming here, and a third, as already stated, was seen this morning steaming at full speed northward. The fate of the other two is as yet unknown.

It would also appear that among the men landed from the V-69 were some who probably were picked up from the water when the other boats were sunk. This idea is borne out by the fact that on the caps of the German sailors on board some were shown to belong to the High Seas Fleet, some to the Home Waters Fleet, some from the Sixth Division, and some from the Twelfth Division.

The wounded also say that the German flotilla was quickly surrounded by a superior force, so that there is little hope that many of their boats were able to escape destruction.

The Dutch authorities on hearing the news of the battle quickly gathered nurses, doctors, and appliances and went to Ymuiden, where the wounded received every possible succor from the devoted band of Red Cross workers.

PRIZE CREW WAS READY TO SINK YARROWDALE

Lieut. Badewitz Tells How He Prevented Mutiny—Two Men Tried to Escape.

BERLIN, Jan. 23, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—Some details of the voyage of the British steamer Yarrowdale, captured by the German commerce raider in the South Atlantic and brought into Swinemuende, were disclosed today by Naval Lieutenant Badewitz, commander of the prize crew which brought her to port, in an interview with a representative of the Overseas News Agency. Reporting the interview the agency says:

"Lieutenant Badewitz, who gives the impression of being a true sailor, told the story of his voyage in a modest way, making light of his own part in it. He was asked how he succeeded in bringing the Yarowdale through the North Atlantic and the blockade into the North Sea with a crew of only sixteen men and over four hundred persons on board. He replied:

"'For such an action you need only to exercise coolness and determined, blunt carelessness, especially if you have to deal with Englishmen. In addition you need to have a handful of smart boys like mine who have their hearts in the right place and revolvers in their pockets. Then you can fetch the devil from his own house.'

"Questioned as to how he held his oddly mingled members of the prisoner crews under discipline, Lieutenant Badewitz replied:

"'The discipline was first rate. Whenever the order to get below was issued the whole crowd of prisoners hurried to the lower decks running like hares.'

"Lieutenant Badewitz said he and the sixteen men of his own crew never left the bridge of the Yarrowdale, and all preparations were made to sink the ship at a moment's notice without leaving the bridge. All on board, he said, knew that he would have sunk the vessel in event of a mutiny or a revolt. The captured Captains were very sensible and did much to hold their men in check. The prisoners thought that they could count upon touching at a Norwegian port. Among them were six members of the British Navy, of whom three belonged to an English armed merchantman on board which they had served as gunners.

"When the Yarrowdale was riding at anchor south of Island Haven, in the Sound, on account of the ice, one British naval gunner and one civilian jumped overboard to swim ashore, but no sooner felt the cold water than they began to cry for help. They were rescued.'

"Before the war Lieutenant Badewitz was employed in the merchant service. He lives in Kiel."

MORE RAIDER VICTIMS LAND.

Frenchmen Say German Ship Then Had 400 Prisoners Aboard.

RIO JANEIRO, Jan. 23.—Twenty-nine members of the crew of the Asmieres and twenty-five members of the crew of the Nantes, victims of the German commerce raider, have been landed at Bahia by the British steamer Ceara.

They report that there were 400 prisoners on the German cruiser at the time they were transferred to the Ceara. The Asmieres was sunk Dec. 2 and the Nantes Dec. 26.

The Danish steamer Hammershus was fired on and halted last night by the garrison of the fort at Santa Cruz. She entered the port at 10 o'clock at night and anchored near the German ships in the harbor. It was reported that she had received provisions and explosives from the German ships and was attempting to put to sea secretly. It became known today, however, that the Captain of the Hammershus made a mistake as to the place of anchorage and started to return to the entrance of the harbor.

SANTO DOMINGO, Jan. 23.—The American steamer Marina, which arrived here yesterday afternoon from Ponce, reported having sighted a suspicious steamer. The strange vessel was seen in the vicinity of Vieques Island, otherwise known as Crab Island, about thirteen miles east of Porto Rico.

THREE GOLD SHIPS ON WAY.

One, Leaving Baltimore, May Transfer Coin to Raider.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 23.—It was common gossip in shipping circles today that three steamers which left here supposedly with coal cleared for River Plate ports and also took out several million dollars in coined American gold. The shipment of gold, it was assumed, was for Germany to be transferred at sea to the raiders sweeping the South Atlantic.

The report is based upon the departure on Jan. 24 for Norfolk of the steamer Ausable. The vessel had coal and a million or two in gold. She was bound for Buenos Aires, but her arrival there has not been reported. She was followed Dec. 29, also with gold enough to buy the ship, by the Maumee. She was also bound to Buenos Aires and is not yet reported there. On Jan. 7 the Winnebago sailed from here for Buenos Aires, also with gold.

GERARD INQUIRES AT BERLIN.

Asks Foreign Office If Americans Were on Yarrowdale.

BERLIN, Jan. 22, (via London, Jan. 23.)—United States Ambassador Gerard today made formal inquiry at the Foreign Office as to whether any Americans were among the neutral prisoners of war on board the Yarrowdale.

PICTURES THE MENACE OF U-BOATS AS SERIOUS

English Writer Calls It the Greatest Danger That Has Ever Threatened Britain.

LONDON, Wednesday, Jan. 24.—In The Daily News today its naval correspondent calls attention to the German submarine activity, and says that he fears the seriousness of the German campaign against merchant shipping is not realised by most of the British people. He adds:

"The daily record of ships sent to the bottom has become so regular a feature in the newspapers that no particular notice is taken of it unless some unusual atrocity attends the incident."

The correspondent recalls that when Germany's submarine blockade began in February, 1915, the British Admiralty issued weekly statements of losses, but says that after thirty-five weeks this was discontinued. During that period the average weekly loss was five vessels, but in the last three months 470 ships were sunk, of which 157 were British. He contends that although the neutral boats sunk outnumbered the British, the loss to Great Britain was little less than if they had all been British ships, because in nearly every case the cargo was destined for Great Britain.

The writer dwells on the multiplication of U-boats, their development in power and their cruising radius, which, he says, has changed the problem since the under-water boats started operations.

"We are confronted with the most serious menace that ever threatened us," the correspondent says, and he contends that it is imperative for the people to cut down their consumption of imported luxuries and live in homelier fashion, thus freeing tonnage for essentials.

SAYS ALLIES' TERMS GUARD JAPAN'S RIGHTS

TOKIO, Jan. 23.—Speaking in the House of Peers today Viscount Motono, the Foreign Minister, charged that Germany had seized Tsing-tao in 1898, preparatory to the occupation later of all of China. He said Japan had entered the war to defend her particular interests and those of her allies and of all humanity.

"On this war," Viscount Motono continued, "depends the liberty of nations. If the Entente victory is incomplete, it is hardly necessary to remark that peace in the Far East, for which Japan has made such sacrifices, will be gravely endangered."

Referring to the failure of the Entente Allies in their reply to President Wilson's recent note to make allusion as to the disposition of Germany's colonies having attracted attention in Japan, Viscount Motono explained that the reply did not contain all the conditions of peace. He said that, to avoid misunderstandings, Japan, when adhering to the joint reply, had adopted measures to safeguard her rights, and that a satisfactory understanding existed with the other members of the Entente.

Tsing-tao is a seaport in the territory of Kiao-Chau, all of which was taken from Germany by Japan in the first year of the present war.

FIGHTING IN RIGA REGION.

Attacks by Germans in White Overalls Beaten Back on Russian Front.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 23, (British Admiralty, per Wireless Press.)—German attacks have been renewed in the Riga region, on the Russian front, but have met with repulse in which the assaulting forces sustained severe losses, the War Office announced today. The statement reads:

"Western Front—In the Riga region, north of Lake Kussgerion, German troops, who wore white overalls, attacked our field posts, but were beaten back.

"After strong artillery preparation the enemy attacked our detachments east of the village of Kalnsem, but were thrown back and sustained great losses.

"On the River Stokhod, in the region of Svidniki and Stari Mossor, our scouts negotiated the enemy's first-line entanglements of barbed wire and penetrated the second line of obstruction. The enemy discovered this movement and opened a strong rifle fire on our scouts. Under cover of this fire the enemy assumed the offensive south of Stari Mossor with about two companies. This offensive was arrested by our artillery fire.

BERLIN, Jan. 23, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The breaking up of a Russian raid after the advancing troops had entered the German first line, west of Dvinsk, is announced by Army Headquarters in today's statement on developments along the Russian front. The statement reads:

A supplementary statement issued tonight reads:

The following bulletin from Austro-Hungarian Headquarters, dated Jan. 21, was received here:

In Volhynia detachments of Brunsh Infantry Regiment No. 8 in a surprise attack entered Russian trenches and brought back one captured officer, 100 men, machine-gun and one mine-thrower. Well-directed artillery fire inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

TEUTONS RESUME DOBRUDJA ADVANCE

SKIRMISHING IN MOLDAVIA

Berlin Reports Minor Successes and Artillery Duels Along the Transylvanian Frontier Line.

BERLIN, Jan. 23, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The Teutonic troops have resumed their advance in Dobrudja, it is announced officially. Bulgarian forces crossed the southern estuary of the Danube near Tultcha and held the ground against Russian attacks. The text of the statement reads:

Front of Archduke Joseph—At some places in the wooded Carpathians and along the frontier mountains to Moldavia there were livelier artillery duels, the weather being frosty and bright.

In engagements between advance guards German and Austro-Hungarian troops took from the enemy between the Slanic and Putna Valleys 100 prisoners, and south of the Kasino Valley drove back stronger hostile forces which were advancing.

In Dobrudja Bulgarian troops crossed the southern arm of the mouth of the Danube near Tultcha and maintained themselves on the north bank against a Russian attack.

Eastern war theatre—In the Obodechti Mountains (Moldavia) hostile troops which undertook reconnoitring operations were driven back at a point east of Nielnica.

THINK SERETH LINE SECURE.

Russians Now Satisfied with Situation in Rumania.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 23, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—I learn from well-informed army sources that in spite of the recent reverses in Rumania, the military situation on the whole is regarded as satisfactory. The difficulties of communication that hampered the Russian forces in Rumania have now been overcome and a large force is holding the Teutons in the Sereth line, which is believed to be the limit of their advance.

In spite of rumors to the contrary, no danger threatens Odessa. All sections of the Western front are abundantly supplied with men and munitions, and the output of munitions is steadily increasing. The quantity of certain arms now available is simply amazing to those who remember the conditions that prevailed during the early stages of the war.

The munitions campaign has been a distinct success and the work of the Ministry of War in conjunction with the great national unions has created in the army a new feeling of confidence as regards material resources.

The army is looking forward to the Spring with hope, more especially in view of the information received here of growing exhaustion in Germany. Allowance must be made for surprises, but there is a general feeling in army circles that the Allies' Spring and Summer campaign will be decisive.

On the Caucasus front the position of the Russians is absolutely secure. The Turks are weak and the Russians are energetically improving their communications, constructing ports, roads, and railways, and have now firmly established their superiority over the enemy.

RAIDS AND SHELLING ALONG WESTERN FRONT

British Capture Some Prisoners and Repulse Attacks—French Active in Alsace.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The official report from British Headquarters in France issued tonight reads as follows:

We carried out a successful raid during this morning northeast of Neuville St. Vaast, and captured some prisoners. In the neighborhood of Fauquissart bombing activity continued again last night.

In addition to that reported in yesterday's communique, two other raids were attempted by the enemy last night between Armentieres and Ploegsteert, in one case the enemy was repulsed before reaching our lines; in the other he succeeded in reaching our trenches, but was immediately driven out. The hostile party came under our machine gun fire both in advancing and returning and left a number of dead in front of our position.

Considerable artillery and trench mortar activity occurred on both sides during the day. We bombarded the enemy's positions at a number of places along our front with good observed results.

Our airplanes were active yesterday in co-operation with our artillery. One of our machines is missing. On the 21st an enemy machine was forced to descend in the neighborhood of Aubigny; the pilot and observer were made prisoners.

BERLIN, Jan. 23, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—Today's Army Headquarters statement regarding operations on the western front follows:

(Army Group of Crown Prince Rupprecht.—Northeast of Armentieres a reconnoitring detachment from Bavarian regiments entered hostile trenches and returned with some prisoners and machine guns. British detachments advancing against our position northwest of Fromelles were repulsed.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—The official communication issued by the War Office tonight reads as follows:

There was quite active cannonading at various points in Champagne and the Argonnes. In Lorraine we carried out a surprise attack against the enemy lines in the region of Hichecourt. An enemy long range gun dropped shells in the region of Froyard.

In Alsace, in the sector of Hirzbach, there were patrol encounters. Artillery fighting occurred in the direction of Largitzen.

In the morning enemy airplanes dropped five bombs on Montdidier. A fokker landed in our lines near Flames. Two other German airplanes were brought down in an aerial engagement in the neighborhood of Marcheleport; another by the fire of our special guns in the direction of Amy (Oise.)

COLD ON ALL FRONTS AN AID TO FIGHTERS

Russians Enabled to Cross Riga-Dvinsk Swamps; Germans to Approach Galatz.

BERLIN, Monday, Jan. 22, (by Wireless via Sayville, Jan. 23.)—Heavy snowfalls followed by biting cold weather on all the battle fronts have helped rather than hindered the fighting. During the last forty-eight hours the weather man seemingly has been entirely impartial, for the cold snap which, in the northeast, has enabled the Russians to cross the swamps between Riga and Dvinsk and to attack the German positions also has made it possible for the Germans in Rumania to approach Galatz, which, ordinarily, is protected by swamps.

In the west, intensely cold weather has been accompanied only partly by a clear atmosphere, enabling the fliers to resume their activity. Neither side, however, has been especially favored. Artillery duels have increased at frequent intervals all along the line from the coast to the Swiss border. Exceptionally active patrolling by the Entente forces has not prevented the Germans from discovering that the French recently have withdrawn to a large extent from their old positions on the Somme front as far south as Peronne and that they have been replaced by British troops, presumably in order to give the French divisions an opportunity to rest in preparation for a gigantic test of strength, which is expected by every one at the first favorable opportunity.

The impression gained from a visit to any part of the front is that both sides expect an unprecedented offensive before long, and that the artillery and patrol activity to which the fighting now is limited is more or less a kind of jockeying for the start, to enable one opponent to gain the advantage by being the first to assume the offensive.

In the east the cold weather is holding up operations considerably, but it not preventing the Russians in the Eastern Carpathians from making desperate efforts to save themselves from being forced backward to such an extent that their position on the upper Sereth River will be flanked and taken.

Stories of alleged tremendous German losses in the Carpathians and in Rumania are vigorously denied, and it is stated that one ordinary German division suffered losses of only 500 men in capturing more than 500 Russian officers and 39,000 soldiers.

ASKS WILSON TO TRY THE DIET-TEST MENU

Mrs. McClary Says the President Is Willing if Mrs. Wilson Gives Her Consent.

POLICE GAIN IN WEIGHT

At the End of the Second Week of the Experiment All but Three Show Increases.

Mrs. Eula McClary, manager of the police rookies' diet kitchen at 49 Lafayette Street, went to Washington yesterday to interest President Wilson in the campaign for cheap but substantial menus. Last night she telephoned to her assistant, Miss Beulah Livingston, that the President had promised to give the 25-cent menu one day's trial in the White House, if he could obtain Mrs. Wilson's consent.

Mrs. McClary said Mr. Wilson also seemed in favor of proclaiming a national health food day, on which no one would spend more than 25 cents for the day's food. This, in his opinion, would offer an object lesson to the people of this country and teach them more about food values than they could learn in any other way.

Yesterday was the end of the second week of the died squad and also the end of the first week during which an absolute minimum of meat was served.

One after another of the men weighed in and it was found that two showed no change, Charles J. Gilroy had lost half a pound and all the others had increased in weight. Dr. Eugene L. Fisk of Life Exhibition Institute seemed quite disturbed over the gain for the week, which amounted to ten pounds even for the twelve men. This is a total gain of eighteen pounds for the two weeks they have been living on 25 cents a day. Not one man in the squad shows a decrease in weight since the first day of the test. Even Gilroy, who was chided by his fellow-dieters yesterday when it was found that he had lost, is now half a pound over the original weight at which he started.

Matthew Shea, the Police Department athlete, who is also taking the test, weighed 168½ yesterday, which is a gain of a pound and a half over his last weighing in.

Dr. Fisk said that the increase during the last week was directly due to the very small amount of meat served.

"I am surprised at their gain," he said. "And I intend to vary the food during the last week. They will get fewer calories and more bulk. I have not yet figured out what caused the gain in flesh, but will do so and embody a report on it in the final analysis of the experiment. We only intended to show that twelve healthy men could maintain their proper weight under the diet, and it is surprising that they have gained so much. These men are doing the regular work of the police school and it is quite strenuous."

The routine under which the twelve men are training is the same as that of all the other candidates for the Police Department. From 9:30 until 10:30 they word hard in the gymnasium; from 10:30 until 12 o'clock they do classroom work; from 12 until 1 o'clock is their luncheon hour; from 1 o'clock until 2 they are in the classrooms; from 2 until 3 o'clock there is the drill in the gymnasium, and their day ends with two hours in the classrooms. Their work in the gymnasium under the direction of Police Lieutenant Charles E. Schofield consists of setting-up exercises, marching, boxing, wrestling, handball, and other hard exercise.

Woman Lawyer Guest.

Mrs. Clarice M. Baright, the lawyer whose recent admission into the State Bar Association was bitterly fought by some of the men members, was the guest at dinner last night. Mrs. Baright said that the food served to the "rookies" was identical with that she eats while preparing for a hard case."

Carl Easton Williams, editor of the Physical Culture Magazine, and Edward L. Wertheim, educational director of the West Side Y. M. C. A., were the guests at luncheon. Mr. Williams said afterward that he considered the experiment a splendid thing.

The three meals yesterday cost 25 cents for each man and afforded them 3,005 calories each. The menus were as follows:

BREAKFAST.
Crullers.
Rolls and Butter.
Coffee.

LUNCHEON.
Potato Soup with Carrots.
Rye Bread and Butter.
Stewed Prunes and Ginger Snaps.
Tea.
869 Calories, cost 8 cents.

Parsnips, Baked, with Sausage.
Samp.
Whole Wheat Bread with Butter.
Bread Pudding with Fruit Sauce.
Tea.
1,128 Calories, cost 10 cents.

The members of the diet squad were much interested in hearing that their diet was to be changed for this, the final week. They refused to make any comment, but it was noticed that several cheered up when they heard that there would be fewer calories to conquer.

Senator Owen Run Down by Auto.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Jan. 23.—United States Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma was run over and slightly injured by an automobile here today.

It is an apparent fact that most Americans over-eat and under-exercise. The result of the sedentary occupations of most city dwellers is the need of a laxative at frequent intervals to insure good health. For this purpose Pluto Water—America's Purest Natural Laxative—is prescribed by physicians and used by thousands of people. Pluto Water is bottled at French Lick Springs and sold by druggists everywhere. See advertisement on last page.—Adv.

JAPAN NOW FACES AN INTERNAL CRISIS

PREMIER SPURS THE NATION

Urges Preparedness for Emergencies—Motono Describes Friendly Relations with America.

TOKIO, Jan. 23.—Japan is confronted with an internal political crisis. The opposition to the administration of Count Terauchi has opened a vigorous campaign on the ground that the Terauchi nonpartisan Cabinet was formed in violation of the spirit of the Constitution. The Constitutional Party, which has a majority in the House of Peers, and is under the leadership of Viscount Kato, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, has joined hands with the Nationalist group in the lower house for war against the Premier.

The battle will be fought out in the Diet, which reconvenes today. Count Terauchi and Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, delivered addresses in defense of the administration.

The press expects the outcome of the crisis to be dissolution and a new election.

In his address today Premier Terauchi expressed satisfaction that Japan's relations with the treaty powers, other than the participants in the war, were "more and more cordial." He asserted that Japan was working in unreserved unison with the Allies, and that Germany's peace conference proposal was rejected because it was not inspired by a sincere desire for peace. In view of the magnitude of the war, the Premier urged the nation to stand united irrespective of class or politics, and to adopt post bellum policies which would protect the prestige and lasting interests of the empire and remove all causes of danger to peace in the Far East.

The Premier said that the Government was paying particular attention to its relations with China and would spare no pains to cultivate neighborly relations. The Japanese administration, he said, was now endeavoring to sweep away all clouds which hitherto had darkened the path of the two nations and establish relations of mutual trust, confidence and helpfulness.

"I need scarcely remind you," continued the Premier, "that armament is an indispensable means of national preservation. Care should always be taken to keep our defense in an absolute condition of efficiency and strength, in due response to the situation among the different powers, our relations with other nations and in proportion to the wealth and resources of the country. To be prepared gainst emergencies is important. The spirit of the people should be invigorated by nursing the Nationalistic idea of preserving the public health. It is equally important that the national resources be increased and industry and commerce encouraged."

In a lengthy address, in which he unequivocally asserted that Germany's ambition for world hegemony was the true cause of the war, Viscount Motono dwelt particularly on the relations between the United States and Japan. He said that Japan had always wished to maintain the most sincerely amicable relations with America.

"If light clouds," he said, "had occasionally obscured, however so little, the relations of the two countries they were generally dissipated by the common good-will of the two Governments. Certainly there exist questions on which our Governments may not be in accord; that happens even between allied countries. However, by examining even the thorniest questions, loyally and frankly, with a determination to settle them in an amicable and conciliatory manner the means of reaching an understanding are surely found. This is the road which the two Governments have always followed to the great satisfaction of the two nations.

"I observe with great joy the symptoms of most genuine sympathy manifested for some time between the two countries. Thus proposals for common action in the financial affairs of China have been made by American capitalists. The Imperial Government will follow with the liveliest interest the subsequent development and economic rapprochement of the two nations."

Viscount Motono maintained that the greatest cause for China's mistrust of Japan was the regrettable Japanese tendency to interfere in China's domestic quarrels. What Japan feared most, he said, was the disintegration of China, but she would do everything to prevent this. The Foreign Minister asserted that Japan's friendly policies must be reciprocated by China, which must recognize Japan's special rights in Southern Manchuria and Eastern Mongolia. Japan should recognize the immense interests of other nations in China, co-operate with powers with which there are special arrangements, and generally seek to conciliate her interests with those of other nations.

"Japan has no intention of pursuing an egoistic policy," Viscount Motono concluded. "She believes she can reach a complete understanding with the interested powers for the good of China and all."

Count Terauchi took office in October, 1916. The Emperor's action in summoning him to form a Cabinet was a surprise both in Japan and abroad, and was vigorously criticised by the Japanese political leaders, who contended that the new Premier did not command public support. Count Terauchi was formerly Governor of Korea and is supposed to represent the radical militarist section in Japan.

CHINA AND JAPAN SETTLE LATEST CLASH

No Police Rights for Japan in Manchuria, and Military Advisers Also Are Rejected.

PEKING, Jan. 23.—Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the Foreign Minister, and Baron Hayashi, Japanese Minister to China, have exchanged final notes for a settlement of the Chengchiatun incident, in which Chinese and Japanese troops clashed.

China has granted the demands for reprimanding and punishing the responsible officers, and also has agreed to warn Chinese soldiers against incivility in their treatment of Japanese. She also has granted an indemnity to the Japanese whose case caused the incident. China has refused Japan's demands for police rights in Southern Manchuria and Eastern Inner Mongolia, and has disregarded the suggestion for the employment of Japanese military advisers and instructors in the military academy.

Japanese correspondence lays emphasis upon Japan's belief that she possesses the right to maintain police wherever Japanese settle in Manchuria, but points out that she is withholding further immediate enforcement of that contention in order that the Chengchiatun incident may be closed.

FOUR AMERICANS HONORED.

Members of Norton's Ambulance Corps in France Cited Individually.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—In a second commendation in army orders, the Second American Automobile Ambulance Section, commanded by Richard Norton, has several of its members mentioned individually. Robert MacCreary of East Aurora, N. Y., and Marcellus Wild of Rochester, N. Y., are named "for their really exceptional devotion to duty."

At the same time R. C. Hoskier and Marcel du Casse, both of New York, and L. H. Northrop of Winnipeg, Canada, received individual mention which entitles them to the war cross.

It is a gift of the late George S. Bowdoin and Mrs. Bowdoin, and was designed by Henry S. Vaughn. The glass for the windows was made by C. E. Kempe & Co. of London.

RAE TANZER ERRED IDENTIFYING WOOER

Mrs. Spielberg, Wife of Lawyer, Quotes Girl as Admitting J. W. Osborne Wasn't Oliver.

Woman's Testimony Is Given to Aid Prosecution of Hotel Clerk for Perjury.

Not only did Rae Tanzer admit that James W. Osborne was not the man who had won her love as Oliver Osborne, but Rose and Dora Tanzer, her sisters, also concluded they had made a similar mistake. This was the testimony yesterday in the Federal Court at the perjury trial of Franklin D. Safford, former Plainfield hotel clerk, by Mrs. Harold Spielberg, wife of a lawyer, and one time council for Rae Tanzer. The recantation of Rae Tanzer was in March, 1915, just before the first trial of Safford, Mrs. Spielberg said. The two sisters told of having made the mistake to help their "little sister," when Mrs. Spielberg visited the sisters in their Bronx flat a short time later.

Mrs. Spielberg said her husband had became interested in the case, and told of a visit by Miss Tanzer at the Spielberg home on March 30, 1915. The witness said that Rae Tanzer appeared to be nervous.

"I have made a terrible mistake," Mrs. Spielberg quoted her as saying. "James W. Osborne is not the man."

When Mr. Spielberg came home Miss Tanzer signed a statement acknowledging an honest mistake, and the happenings surrounding the recantation are now an often-told story in the evidence gathered since Rae Tanzer first accused James W. Osborne of being Oliver Osborne, and started suit against him for $50,000.

Even after this, Mrs. Spielberg said, Rae testified at the first Safford trial and said that James W. Osborne was Oliver Osborne. She explained this later, the witness said, by saying that Roger B. Wood, then Assistant United States District Attorney, made her angry and that she felt sorry for Safford.

In cross-examining Mrs. Spielberg, Benjamin Slade for Safford tried to get the witness to answer questions that would have brought before the jury some of the findings made by the Rules Committee of the House on its investigation of United States District Attorney H. Snowden Marshall. Judge Hand ruled the questions out.

In reply to a question Mrs. Spielberg said that when she found that Rae had made a mistake David Slade, then appearing for her and since indicted, was notified. She said that when David Slade came to her husband's office he was nervous and said: "What have you done to me, little girl? Didn't you tell me that Mr. Osborne was the man?" To this Rae said, according to Mrs. Spielberg: "Yes, but when I saw him in the Commissioner's office I knew he was not the man." Mr. Spielberg corroborated the testimony given by his wife.

Joseph Marshall, or Emil Erber, the witness who spent a night in the Tombs with Charles H. Wax, the self-confessed Oliver Osborne, and who refused to answer questions concerning an alleged interview he had with Wax at that time, was committed to Ludlow Street Jail for contempt. Judge Hand signed the order because he "willfully and deliberately" disobeyed the court's order.

William Hawley, a retired broker of 490 West End Avenue and Acting Detective Sergeant William J. Haskins were placed on the witness stand to tell of a call they made on Rae Tanzer "an endeavor to get her to see Mr. Osborne."

NEED AID FOR POE COTTAGE.

Committee Appeals for Funds to Maintain and Restore Home.

Funds for the maintenance and to some extent for the restoration of the little cottage where Edgar Allan Poe once lived, at Kingsbridge Road and 196th Street, the Bronx, are being sought by the Poe Cottage Committee of the Bronx Society of Arts and Sciences, which has been designated by the city to care for the building and its surrounding grounds, called Poe Park. Mrs. A. G. Fiske of 256 East 174th Street, Chairman of the committee, yesterday said:

"It is planned to remove certain inappropriate and unsightly modern features and to refurnish the home with objects once belonging to the poet or with others entirely in harmony with the period of its occupation by Edgar Allan and Virginia Poe. Gifts of household furnishings of the period of 1830-1850 are desired, subject to their appropriate character and size. Contributions should be sent to Olin J. Stephens, Treasurer of the Bronx Society of Arts and Sciences, Gerard Avenue, the Bronx."

CIVIC FEDERATION DIVIDED BY PEACE

Speakers Praise and Blame President Wilson for His Address.

WOMEN PLEAD FOR EUROPE

On Miss Anne Morgan's Suggestion, Foreign Committee Will Aid in Work of Reconstruction.

President Wilson's peace address to the Senate provoked such vigorous criticism and praise at the closing sessions yesterday of the seventeenth annual convention of the National Civic Federation, that on two occasions Chairmen at the meetings advised those present that the organization was not responsible for any partisan views. The final meetings were given over almost entirely to a consideration of the military problems of the nation.

Miss Anne Morgan introduced the only resolution not dealing with some phase of militarism, and acting upon her suggestion the Woman's Department of the Federation recommended greater participation by the federation in reconstruction work in Europe. It was decided to include in the program of the Foreign and Home Relief Committee of the Federation, a department to co-operate with existing organizations engaged in such work.

Discussion of the President's address preceded the dinner at the Hotel Astor which closed the convention. Henry A. Wise Wood, who had been selected to discuss the recent mobilization of troops at the Mexican border, startled the members by asserting bluntly that "the trouble with the United States was that it had a Pacifist in the White House." This statement, coming as it did immediately after several references had been made to the President's address, brought an immediate comment from L. B. Schram, then presiding as Chairman.

"This is a nonpartisan organization," said Mr. Schram, "and those who are here will please take note that it is not responsible for the personal views of those who speak from this platform."

Hamilton Holt, who is a member of the League to Enforce Peace, and has taken a leading part in recent discussions looking to an early cessation of hostilities, lauded the President's address as potentially greater even than the Declaration of Independence, and thereby forced the Chairman, this time Daniel J. Tobin, to make a second and similar explanation.

"We know now that President Wilson has vision," Mr. Holt said, after summing up the advantages to be hoped for from a league to enforce peace, "and who can say but what he has added to the Declaration of Independence an even greater utterance, that of a Declaration of Interdependence?"

Professor William B. Guthrie, who is an advocate of a World's Court League, also opposed the arrangement suggested by President Wilson, and insisted that an international court, comprising the general character of the United States Supreme Court, would prove the most effective agency for adjusting controversies between the countries of the world.

Owen R. Lovejoy, Chairman of the National Child Welfare League, asserted that President Wilson's advocacy of an international peace was far more sane than some of the utterances of an ex-President who had recently announced that such a league would virtually attack a man for trying to beat his wife.

While the President's address was receiving attention in the main hall of the convention, the woman's Department adopted a resolution to send a Committee to the Congress for the Advancement of Americanism at Washington. Miss Morgan, Miss Robinson Smith, Mrs. August Belmont, Miss Maude Wetmore, Mrs. Francis McNeil Bacon, Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the Governor, and Mrs. Van Rensselaer ware among those chosen as members of this committee.

The following were elected as members of the Executive Council of the federation: Ralph M. Easley, Chairman; Executive Council; John Hays Hammond, Chairman Department Regulation of Industrial Corporations; Louis A. Coolidge, Chairman Welfare Department; August Belmont, Chairman Department Compensation Industrial Accidents; Miss Maude Wetmore, Chairman Woman's Department; Talcot Williams, Chairman Industrial Economics Department; E. R. A. Seligman, Chairman Taxation Department; Louis B. Schram, Chairman Department Industrial Accidents; A. J. Porter, Chairman Minimum Wage Commission; Emerson McMillin, Chairman Department Regulation of Public Utilities; George W. Perkins, Chairman Department on Profit Sharing; Warren S. Stone, Chairman Department on Social Insurance; Vincent Astor, Chairman Food and Drugs Department; Jeremiah W. Jenks, Chairman Department on Industrial Mediation; William R. Willcox, Chairman Department on Pensions, and D. L. Cease, Secretary.

TO TRAIN ALL UNDER 16.

Women Would Have Children, Take Physical Exercise.

Compulsory school physical training for children under 16 years of age was recommended by the Woman's Department of the National Civic Federation in a resolution adopted yesterday. The resolution also approved universal service. It follows in part:

"The Woman's Department of the National Civic Federation believes that in a democracy all citizens should be equally responsible for the security and safety of the State in times of peace and war. It approves the principle of universal service and the liability of all citizens to training in such form and degree as experts and governmental authorities deem necessary. The Department subscribes to the principle of compulsory physical training in all schools for children under 16."

The resolution, introduced by Mrs. Charles F. Meyer, was carried without opposition. More than 100 women from many parts of the United States, some of them leaders in social activities, were present.

NEED OF DEFENSE IMMEDIATE.

H. E. Coffin Says Safety Depends on Industrial Preparedness.

The statement that the United States was in a precarious diplomatic position because of the war was used as an argument for immediate industrial preparedness by Howard E. Coffin, Chairman of the Committee on Industrial Mobilization of the National Council of Defense, in an address at a dinner of the National Civic Federation last night. There were more than 900 guests at the dinner, which was held at the Hotel Astor as the closing feature of the two-day convention of the federation. Mr. Coffin added that if the United States were drawn into war, and lost command of its sea routes, it would not have the facilities to make explosives enough to last a week.

He asserted that, notwithstanding that the United States had been "skating on thin ice diplomatically" for the last two years, there was marked ignorance among the people generally as to the needs of the nation in the event of war. He expressed great surprise at this because it was his belief, he said, that there was very good reason to suppose that the ice of diplomacy would become "still thinner" before the United States had solved all the problems with which it is confronted.

"Whereas, a year ago," Mr. Coffin said, "we were saying in awed tones that the United States would probably need as many as 500,000 armed men to protect this country in the event of invasion, the General Staff at Washington now estimates that at least 1,500,000 men, equipped for instant action, would be necessary with 1,500,000 more who could be in readiness in ninety days. They have learned this from what has become known of the power of foreign nations, and it is important to bear this in mind when it is considered that the entanglement of the United States in foreign affairs is dependent almost on the flip of a coin."

The topic for discussion assigned to the speakers last night was: "Can the Great Interests of Our Country Join Forces to Meet the Serious Problems Arising Out of the War?" Mr. Coffin's answer was: "They must join forces." It was an entirely different matter, he added, as to the manner in which this joining of forces was to be accomplished. He said that the National Council of Defense, the Secretary of War, and the Administration had already made considerable progress, and he referred to measures pending in Congress which will enable the Government to make use of private industries in the event of war. He said that 20,000 reports on the equipment of various concerns manufacturing products of need in time of war were being sorted at Washington, and action had been taken to give the Government the right to commandeer entire industries for the manufacture of munitions.

George E. Roberts, assistant to the President of the National City Bank, commented on after war problems, and the need of close co-operation between capital and labor. Talcott Williams, head of the School of Journalism of Columbia University, also spoke.

MATINEE OF THE FAR EAST.

Eva Gauthier in Folk Songs and Roshanara in Dances.

Eva Gauthier's messo-soprano songs of the frolics and follies of Java and Malaysia generally, with Roshanara's dumb show of Ceylon harvest, Hindu snake dance, and others kept a spotlight busy at the Comedy Theatre yesterday before a matinée audience that filled every seat in the little house. Marjorie Bentley also danced to the singer's Italian "La Folletta," and French "Nymphs et Sylvains," the latter with Carl Hemmer paired in Russian ballet style. But it was a Greek "Grand de la Mariée" that brought down the final ovation for Doris Booth.

Doris Booth, appearing by courtesy of Daniel Frohman, was officially 5 years old and looked less. Hardly more than a baby, in a boy's handful of asure frou-frou, the child with elfin humor pranced about like Pavlowa, and took her bouquets like a Patti, blowing kisses and smiles. Miss Gauthier wore native costume for the numbers from the Far East, singing also in the native tongues, with scarce a touch of European sophistication. She crouched like Ratan Devi on the stage, while Roshanara exhibited dances once known at the Palace on Broadway as well as in Oriental courts.

French Canada folksongs opened the matinée with further help of a male quartet—Paul Haskell, Justin Lawry, W. D. Tucker, and J. D. Thomas—while a string quartet reinforced A. Bomboni at the piano in the orchestra pit.

THE FLONZALEY QUARTET.

Music by Moor, Bach, Beethoven, and Glazunoff Heard.

The Flonzaley Quartet, though they had given an extra concert of new compositions of their season's list, are apparently so well provided with such compositions that one more appeared in the program of their second subscription concert last evening. This was a prelude and fugue for string quartet, still in manuscript, by Emmanuel Moór, whose works have several times figured on their programs. It often easier to find evidences of facility and proficient workmanship in Mr. Moór's music than original thought demanding utterance. There are evidences of original thought in this. There is a serious and reflective beauty in the prelude, written with singular effectiveness for the stringed instruments. The fugue seems somewhat less spontaneous; there are few who can today move freely and authoritatively within the form. It has some, though not all, of the freedom that modern composers allow themselves in treating it, and is undoubtedly effective and vigorous. The quartet played the work with splendid sonority and finish.

Mr. d'Archambeau gave an admirable performance of Bach's suite for violoncello in E flat, that is not often brought forward; and the other numbers were Beethoven's E minor quartet, Op. 95, music that stands on the threshold of his last period; and Glazunoff's quartet in D, Op. 1, to which he already puts his signature as a cultivator of the folksong. The next concert will be given at the Garrick. The promise of the new French theatre for this season—it was promised for the beginning of this season—appears to have been a vain one and the subscribers will have to wait till next Fall. The much-heralded building in West Forty-fifth Street is still in the process of construction.

Mrs. Whitney as Stage Decorator.

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney will make her bow as a stage decorator next Monday afternoon, when the Stage Society presents Arturo Giovanitti's war drama, "As It Was in the Beginning," at the Comedy. Mrs. Whitney has designed the settings for the play, which was acted in Italian last Fall at the People's Theatre in the Bowery. The cast will include Adrienne Morrison, Gertrude Berkeley, Mary Rehan, Thomas Wise, Robert Thomeas, Edward Ellis, William Raymond, Charles Fleming, John Salapella, Tracy Barrow, and Louis La Bay.

Chernlavsky Trio Heard Again.

Soon sailing for Australia over the Pacific, whence they came from Russia via Japan, the Chernlavsky Trio gave a second concert at Carnegie Hall yesterday with the support of their New York début. Again the three brothers mingled solos with their ensemble pieces, of which Schubert's trio, opus 99, was the best of the matinée. In collaboration they showed artistic restraint of some exasperations that appeared more glaringly in Leo's violin concerto by Ernst. or Mischel's for 'cello by Goltermann. Apart from a collective vivacity in Glinka's "Russian Romance" and one of Brahms's "Hungarian Dances," the most successful individually was the brother Jan in piano solos of Chopin.

NEW $500,000 CLUB FOR WINTER BATHING

ICE SKATING IN SUMMER

House with Glass Dome and Great Pool to Cost Half a Million—Fifty Minutes from Town.

To provide all the Winter luxuries of Palm Beach within fifty minutes of Columbus Circle is the plan of a group of prominent New Yorkers who yesterday announced the completion of plans for a five-hundred-thousand-dollar all-year clubhouse to be built on a sixty-five-acre tract on Manursing Island, in the Sound, off Rye, N. Y. The principal feature of the clubhouse will be a glass-domed swimming pool of sea water, drawn through pipes reaching three miles out into the Sound, which will be kept at the temperature of the ocean at Palm Beach.

The house is to be the home of the Miantonomoh Club, which, though recently organized, already has among its members representatives of nearly all of New York's leading families. Although the club will confine its membership to men, house privileges will be extended to families and friends. The initiation fee will be $200 and the annual dues $100. In addition, members will be asked to subscribe to $500 in club bonds. Membership will be limited to 500.

In announcing the venture, Worthington Whitehouse of 9 East Forty-sixth Street said last night that such a club had long been needed in metropolitan life. Mr. Whitehouse is on the Membership Committee, as are also Percy A. Rockefeller, Edwin Gould, P. Chauncey Anderson, William H. Browning, Edgar L. Marston, Marseilis C. Parsons, Waldron Williams, and Robert B. Van Cortlandt.

"The idea of the club," said Mr. Whitehouse yesterday, "was that an all-year out of the town meeting place ought to be provided where people could go for week-ends, dinners, recreations, and the like, and at the same time, in a way, have almost tropical facilities provided for bathing. In other words, the founders of the club aim to provide what almost might be termed a miniature Palm Beach for the many people who are unable to escape the cold weather, howsoever much they may desire to do so."

The plans, as drawn by Warren & Wetmore, architects, at 16 East Forty-seventh Street, provide for a two-story brick and stucco building in the semi-Georgian or American Colonial type. The structure, arranged in two long, low-lying wings, will have a total frontage of about 400 feet. The entire front will be given over to double-deck porches, from which one may view the Sound.

The clubhouse will contain twenty-five or more bedrooms, a ballroom; private dining rooms, billiard and smoking rooms, bowling alleys, and a spacious, glass-inclosed lounge terraces. The chief feature, however, will be the salt water swimming tank, running through the middle of the building. On both sides of the pool, protected against stray splashes by glass, are to be small dining rooms, where, amid palms and tropical foliage, members may take refreshment while watching the bathers.

To insure against contagion the water to be used in the tank will be pumped in from far out in the Sound, and a specially arranged heating system will be installed to maintain the proper temperature. This sort of bathing, according to Mr. Whitehouse, is not obtainable at any clubhouse on the Atlantic Coast, though a similar plan has been in operation on the Pacific Coast for a few years.

During the Winter months, in addition to the bathing, facilities will be provided for skating, curling, and other Winter sports. In the Summer the tank will be adjusted to meet the changed conditions, and then, when the members think about skating, an artificial rink can be created by means of the refrigeration plant. So, as Mr. Whitehouse pointed out, the changing seasons are likely to mean little to the members of the Miantonomoh Club.

The club has acquired a stretch of shore about 1,000 feet in length, and this will be turned into a model beach. Plans for this are to be based on studies made of the best features of the foreign watering places. One thing the club will introduce is the bathing machine, so that next Summer, when the clubhouse probably will be opened, the Rye shore will have somewhat the appearance of Dover or Calais.

STONE REPUDIATES CHARGE.

Shows, in News Injunction Suit, Untermyer Accused Him Wrongly.

It was not Melville E. Stone, General Manager of The Associated Press, who, in 1905, was "restrained from wire-tapping," according to an affidavit filed with the Federal District Court yesterday by F. B. Jennings, counsel for The Associated Press, in its injunction suit against William Randolph Hearst's International News Service. Arguments of both sides were presented last week before Judge A. N. Hand of the Federal Court, and an affidavit showing that Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the International News Service, had named the wrong Stone in his argument when he referred to the 1905 injunction as one of several filed in rebuttal. The person named in the case cited by Mr. Untermyer was not really Oscar M. Stone, and not Melville E. Stone, according to Mr. Stone's rebuttal affidavit.

"The deponent feels particularly outraged that the statement of a reported case, charging him with such practices, and with the use of shuffling evasiveness in affidavits presented in support thereof, should have been made in open court," Mr. Stone's affidavit read. "There is not the slightest foundation for any such statement, and the counsel was entirely unjustified in assuming, without any verification, that the Stone referred to as one of the defendants in the case was the deponent."

Mr. Stone said he began an investigation after Mr. Untermyer cited this case and ascertained who the real Stone was.

Another affidavit presented by Mr. Jennings yesterday set forth further details by Arthur Sullivan and Ronald S. Wishart, Associated Press employes who worked on The Associated Press printing telegraph machines in the office of The New York American, which is in the same building as the office of the International News Service, and both of which are controlled by Mr. Hearst. They deposed that they had frequently seen editors of the International News Service examine news that came into The American office over The Associated Press instruments and make notes of what they carried away.

The charge of The Associated Press is that the International News made a practice of selling to papers taking its service news which had been gathered at great expense by The Associated Press.

Counsel for both sides are to present briefs on Monday.

Plays Schumann and Chopin.

Mr. Carl Friedberg, who has played the pianoforte several times this season in New York in connection with other instruments and other musicians, gave the first recital of his own yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall. His program was devoted to Schumann and Chopin. Of the pieces by Schumann few have not received attention from pianists in public, the scherzo in G minor from the collection called "Bunte Blätter"; the Novelette in D, Op. 21, No. 1, and two of the three Romances, Op. 28, of which only the second is well known. Besides these his list included the "Etudes Symphoniques" and the Intermezzo from the "Faschingsschwank aus Wien." His playing of the "Etudes Symphoniques" was musical and sympathetic, now grandiose, now intimately poetical, though it sometimes missed a note or two and sometimes let the rhythm run a little loose. There were charm, vivacity and poetical feeling in his playing of the other pieces. The Chopin numbers were familiar and admired.

OFFICIAL RECOGNITION FOR FLAG'S DEFENDER

Treasury Praises Man Who Knocked Another Down for Wiping Hands on Old Glory.

Signal Quartermaster L. H. Luksich, attached to the recruiting office of the United States Coast Guard here, who, on Jan. 3, while on duty at the Battery, knocked a man down for wiping his muddy hands on the American flag displayed at a recruiting station, has been officially commended by Treasury Department officials.

Luksich is a naturalized citizen, born in Austria. Official mention of the incident was made to the department by Captain G. L. Carden, recruiting officer in charge, who also, on receiving a report on the matter from Luksich, personally commended him for his prompt action in resenting an insult to the national colors. A report of the incident published at the time was widely printed and was the subject of much comment. Several national patriotic societies have taken note of the incident and letters of commendation have been addressed to the Treasury Department and to Luksich. The following letter from the Treasury Department, signed by A. J. Peters, Assistant Secretary, was sent to the young guardsman:

"It has been brought to the notice of the Department that while you were at your post of duty on Jan. 3 last at the recruiting office of the Coast Guard in New York City, a man approached the recruiting board and wiped his hands on the American flag which was standing nearby, and that you resented this indignity by knocking the man down, immediately reporting your action to your superior officer in a quiet, unassuming manner.

"The department desires to commend the spirit of loyalty and patriotism which impelled your ready defense of the national colors, and in voicing this commendation I am not unmindful that you are a naturalized American citizen, for the reason that the incident is rendered the more conspicuous by this fact, and affords gratifying evidence of your assimilation of the spirits and best traditions of the country of your adoption."

AGREE ON REVENUE BILL.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Democratic members of the Committee on Ways and Means practically completed today the draft of the new revenue bill, and a party caucus is planned for Thursday night to pass on the measure. Chairman Kitchin estimated today that the bill would produce nearly $250,000,000 revenue to meet the Treasury deficit for the next fiscal year.

There has been no modification of the plan agreed upon several days ago by the Democratic members of the committee who decided to raise the entire amount of revenue needed by a tax on "excess profits" and a higher inheritance tax. Only the administrative features of the bill remain to be worked out, and it was said by Chairman Kitchin today that the "excess profits" tax would be collected just as the income tax was collected.

The Democratic members of the committee will submit to the caucus a proposal to raise the existing tax on inheritances 50 per cent., and to levy a new tax of 8 per cent. on all "excess profits." This latter tax will be directed at copartnerships and corporations. "Excess profits" are to be construed as all profits above an 8 per cent. return on capital stock plus a flat $5,000 exemption.

By a new provision inserted in the bill today, the President would be empowered to lower by proclamation the exemptions of the income tax below $2,000 a year, instead of $3,000, the present minimum limit, and to increase the surtax rates of higher incomes whenever he believes expenditures are going to exceed revenues. This provision is expected by its framers to produce $100,000,000 in time of emergency, and its moral effect is expected to tend to hold expenditures down.

SKIMMED MILK GOOD, HOUSEWIVES LEARN

Adopt Resolution Asking That Law Governing Its Sale Here Be Modified.

What was described as a "modern experience meeting" was held yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Astor, and 500 housewives had an opportunity to catechise twenty-four experts in matters relating to the home, ranging from how many calories a grain of canary bird seed should contain to high cost of living problems.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Home Economics Committee of the National Special Aid Society. The invitations sent out asked the women "to come and ask Commissioner Dillon why an egg should be stamped; Professor Mary S. Rose, how to fatten a family on a lean purse, and M. Panchard, chef of the McAlpin Hotel, how to make the home attractive." Among the other respondents on the platform were Dr. Carl Alsberg, head of the United States Bureau of Chemistry; Commissioner Joseph Hartigan of the City Department of Weights and Measures; Dr. Charles F. Langworthy, Chief of the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture; Professor Lafayette Mendel of Yale, and Miss May Van Arsdale, but these were only there to answer questions about food.

To the surprise of the women, skimmed milk was highly praised, and the difference between brown and white eggs was considered negligible after the artistic side of the question had been discussed. A resolution was passed calling on the city and State to set a standard for skimmed milk. Dr. Lucius Brown, head of the Bureau of Pure Food and Drugs of the Health Department, said that, as far as his department was concerned, the resolution was in high favor. The resolutions follow:

1. Resolved, That this meeting calls upon the Legislature of the State of New York and the Board of Health to set a bacterial and total solids and maximum fat standard for skimmed milk in this city.

2. To modify its ruling concerning the sale of skimmed milk in the city.

3. To offer for sale at special skimmed milk stations and at Department of Health stations, and at every infants' milk station in the city, clean skimmed milk.

It was explained that a quart of pure milk contained 700 calories, and skimmed milk half that.

TO HEAR FROM CANADA.

Her Achievements in War to be the Theme of a Dinner Here.

The Canadian Society of New York will give a dinner at the Biltmore next Saturday night, at which the speakers will be Sir Thomas White, M. P., K. C. M. G., Minister of Finance for Canada; Rodolphe Lemieux, former Postmaster General of Canada; Darwin P. Kingsley, President of the New York Life Insurance Company, and Miss Constance Boulton of Toronto. The announcement of the members of the society contains this paragraph:

"Canada is spiritually aflame. She is out in the world under the banner of the empire fighting for human liberty, glorious, inspiring. Is it possible, we ask ourselves, that the heroes holding their share of the line in Belgium, in France, in Greece, are merely Canadian boys such as we were when we were Canadian boys? Certainly they are, and we are so proud of the fact that we are going to celebrate it."

PUBLIC UTILITY STRIKE LAWS.

The leaders of labor dissemble nothing. With candor and on the instant they denounce any and every proposal for the protection of the public. It is their inalienable right to take their employers by surprise, and thus extort from the public which supports the public utilities their utmost demands. To propose that their demands shall be investigated by any authority and to require delay for that purpose is to organize their defeat by allowing opportunity for the same preparation for hostilities which it is right for them to possess. A struggle on even terms, with a decision on the merits, is not for them. It is difficult to discover the merits of that position, and the leaders of labor give no help. That is the position they take upon the New York proposal of law for the regulation of public-utility strikes, just as it is upon the proposal on behalf of the President of a Federal law. Yet the two proposals are not alike and deserve different treatment.

The Federal proposal begins at the end of a public-utility labor dispute. It takes effect only when there is a strike. The New York proposal is more logical. It begins at the beginning of the employment instead of at the end of the dispute. It allows everything that labor claims as a right except the right to strike, contrary to the public's right to uninterrupted service from public servants, whether corporations or unions. Freedom of contract is secured both to the men and the corporations under the supervision of a body representative of both interests. The duties of the men and the corporations are both declared. The right of the men to organize is specifically granted, and the duty is imposed of registration of their organization, its officers, and rules.

There is no compulsion to make a contract of service. The men may do so if they choose, and having chosen they are required to file their acceptance of the terms of employment. A start is made with present conditions, and provision is made for alterations in methods fair to both and under the oversight of wage boards representing both. Provision is made for appeal, if necessary, from the wage boards to the Commission, and, if not necessary, for the registration of the contract of employment with the Commission. Responsibility for discipline and efficiency is put upon the employer, with similar provision for appeal and redress of grievances. Hiring at will is forbidden, thus guaranteeing to the men security of employment and to the public continuity of service. A definite period of employment is to be agreed upon, or in default of agreement is to be from year to year. Lockouts and strikes are both forbidden during negotiation, investigation, and determination as provided. Violation of the provisions is made a misdemeanor punishable by fine. The plan is offered for criticism, not as a finality. It has been drawn by Mr. JULIUS HENRY COHEN, counsel successful in the difficult negotiations which settled the needle-trades strike in this city, and by Mr. OSCAR S. STRAUS, Chairman of the Public Service Commission. The general idea is supported by Dr. VAN HISE, one of the arbitrators in a steam railway strike settled under Federal procedure.

Such compulsion as the proposal provides is upon both sides. There is no compulsion of labor or of hire. In all cases the first provision is for voluntary agreement, the first action being that of the men seeking work. Both sides are safeguarded in their right of appeal to disinterested authority. Punishment is provided for both sides, because the act punished is violation of a voluntary agreement as well as injurious to the public interests. If there is to be any control of labor organizations, it is difficult to see how it could be milder, fairer, or more logical. There must be some control, unless license is to be given for treacherous attack upon the public over the back of corporations. If the public of New York wishes to be protected, now is the time to express its preference for this plan or another. In default of such expression the public cannot complain if the labor leaders infer that their procedure is approved.

THE UNIVERSAL ENCYCLOPEDIA.

"We must remember," says Colonel ROOSEVELT in his message on Mr. WILSON'S address to the Senate, "two or three plain bits of homely fact." It is always a pain to differ, one feels a sense of guilt in differing, with the Colonel, but, as he has often shown us, only one plain bit of homely fact must be remembered. Whatever is said by Mr. WILSON or by anybody else will be found much better said, if it happens to be eternally right, in the "Complete Works of Theodore Roosevelt," and, if it is eternally wrong, has been triumphantly confuted in the same library of universal wisdom. The Colonel has the higher modesty of being just to his own works. All them that thirst for knowledge he puts on the road to its sources. He directs the wayfaring man thus:

> As far as I am concerned, those interested in my views on these matters will find them in my address to the Nobel Peace Prize Committee in Norway at the end of April, 1910, and also if they will turn to the detailed outline of a "world league to enforce peace of righteousness" in "America and the World War," the book I published more than two years ago, as well as to my recent articles.

Everybody is interested in the Colonel's views, and he has a full set of them on everything; and such is his comprehensive genius that his books have either anticipated or postticipated the whole world of knowledge. The Constitutions of Clarendon, Magna Carta, the Bill of Rights, the Mayflower Compact, the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, WASHINGTON'S Farewell Address, the Emancipation Proclamation, all these are to be found in their germ or in their best form in the "Complete Works." There is nothing sound in HAMILTON, JAY, MADISON, JEFFERSON, or ADAMS that cannot be discovered many times sounder in the "Complete Works." Roving, careless of space and time, as it has been the Colonel's golden fate to rove, he writes always of things he has done. He fought at Bunker Hill, he crossed the Delaware, he made the Louisiana Purchase, he was DANIEL BOONE and GEORGE ROGERS CLARK, he, and nobody else, killed TECUMSEH, he won the Battle of New Orleans, he fell at the Alamo, he fought through the Mexican War, he "saved Oregon" and conquered California. As JOHN MARSHALL, and again as President ROOSEVELT, he interpreted the Constitution. As Justice BENJAMIN ROBBINS CURTIS he dissented from the Dred Scott decision, which he was to lambaste so mightily in 1912. Doubtless it was his subliminal memory of his antenatal experience in the Supreme Court that made him so eager for the recall of judicial decisions. That Mr. LINCOLN was an avatar of the Colonel "every schoolboy" knows. The Colonel discovered both poles, and would have discovered more, if more there were; and those interested in his views on arctic and antarctic exploration will find them in the "Complete Works." It was right that the man, if he be no more than man, who did everything worth doing should write everything worth writing.

Those interested in his views on all matters from ADAM to ZIMMERMANN, from Alaska to Wart Hogs, from Aviation to Zymotic Diseases, will turn to the "Complete Works." They are the only and truly complete works. Nothing is missing. Any statesman, orator, author, man of science, discoverer, soldier, sailor, who thinks he has something to say should keep it back. The Colonel has got ahead of him. He will be either a pitiful plagiarist or a logomaniacal logomachist, probably from Byzantium.

A PRAYER FOR TODAY.

God knows, we need men now! We need men whose trust is not in words, in rhetoric, in fine phrases, or in noble expressions of sentiment, but men, genuine, sincere, devoted; men who do not so much talk about their love of country or their passion for liberty or humanity as men that do love their country and do love their liberty so much that they are willing to give liberty to others as well as claim it for themselves; men who think not merely of what they can get out of their country, but what they can give to their country; men who, upon the basis of plain, practical, and sensible hard work in the ordinary affairs of life, carry ever noble idealism and a sincere capacity for self-devotion.

These are words for the time. When ELIHU ROOT uttered them on Monday night it was a need of the time that extorted them from him. Three years ago such an utterance would have passed for a generalisation, or would not have been made at all because it would have been thought unnecessary, in the general American complacency. Today it is a prayer for the need of the times.

The war has disturbed the American complacency in many ways. One has been in the impairment of our egotism, the creation of a spirit of questioning concerning our perfection—the spirit that exists already in most other nations, but was late in dawning with us. We have been taught by the war that there had some unnoticed under our flowerage of fine words and self-contentment many evil growths. The patter of liberty and patriotism had satisfied us so that we had not inquired about the reality under it. We have been made to face the fact that there are among us those who "think merely "about what they can get out of their "country, not what they can give to "their country." We have had to learn that much of our talk about liberty meant only pleasure in our own liberty, not a concern for the liberty of others.

These are not faults confined to us, but they are faults from which, as a nation, we had believed ourselves free. It is something of a shock to find that they not only exist but are powerful, so powerful that they can make themselves an influence in public sentiment and even in the National Legislature, so powerful as to exert an influence upon our legislative acts, so noticeable as to create among those not fond of us the belief that they are rooted factors in the national character. That they are not, and must not become. If these weeds grow unchecked, what will become of the garden? "We need men now," indeed.

NOT REUNITED.

Two highly interesting tables which appeared in The Tribune on Monday furnish unimpeachable premises from which, it appears to us, The Tribune has drawn some not obvious conclusions. The first table is from the World Almanac, and the second The Tribune has constructed for itself. Together they show that Mr. HUGHES ran hopelessly behind most of the Republican candidates; in most States he was at the very bottom of the ticket, and in no State did he run as well as some other Republican candidate. The Tribune's conclusion that hundreds of thousands of Republicans who voted the party ticket in general scratched Mr. HUGHES'S name, and that this was what gave Mr. WILSON his great majority, is evidently correct.

The Tribune demonstrates that, while Mr. WILSON had a popular plurality over Mr. HUGHES of 567,406, the Republicans had a popular plurality for their State candidates of 573,891, or 5,985 more than Mr. WILSON'S. Its first table, quoted from the World Almanac, is here reproduced:

Plurality for Wilson, 567,406.

The Tribune then presents its own table showing the pluralities given in the different States to Senatorial candidates. Where no Senatorial election was held, it uses the Governorship figures; and where neither Senator nor Governor was elected, the net pluralities of candidates for the House of Representatives are taken. In the case of Louisiana the Presidential plurality is used of necessity. Thus constructed, the table reads:

Republican plurality, 573,291.

*Vote for Congress. †Vote for President.

From these tables The Tribune deduces the comfortable conclusion that the Republicans lost the Presidency, but "virtually regained national ascendency." All the elements in it were able to unite, and the Democracy no longer faces two parties, but one reunited party which is stronger than itself. Now, these conclusions can easily be drawn from the figures by any old-fashioned partisan reasoner whom naked figures content. Why did Mr. HUGHES run half a million votes behind his ticket? Because he was unsatisfactory to one wing of the party or the other. Those dissatisfied with him were able to find in their local candidates men who satisfied them. California gave Senator JOHNSON 296,815 and Mr. WILSON 3,773 plurality; Kansas gave Governor CAPPER 102,482 and Mr. WILSON 36,930; Wisconsin gave Senator LA FOLLETTE 116,159 and Mr. HUGHES only 28,281; Washington gave Senator POINDEXTER 96,948 and Mr. WILSON 16,594.

The same voters who were dissatisfied with Mr. HUGHES to the point of voting against him were satisfied with JOHNSON, CAPPER, LA FOLLETTE, and POINDEXTER, and voted for them. If somebody nominated in the same way, by the same influences, as Mr. HUGHES, and discussing the issues in the same way as he did, had been running for Governor or Senator in Kansas, California, Wisconsin, and Washington, instead of CAPPER, JOHNSON, LA FOLLETTE, and POINDEXTER, such candidates would have been scratched. In other words, the Progressives came back only where Progressive candidates were nominated, and nominated by Progressive votes. When their old enemies nominate candidates they still vote for the Democrat; and the Democracy does not face a reunited Republican party, but an opposition divided into two factions which carry their hostility to each other even to the polls.

THE TREATY WITH COLOMBIA.

Our trade with South America has been greatly increased during the war, and it is still growing. Last year's gain in our exports to South American countries was 55 per cent. For the first time Argentina's imports from the United States exceeded those from Great Britain. Before the war British shipments to that country were more than twice as large as our own. We desire, of course, to keep the additional trade in the coming days of peace, when those countries may be inclined to seek again the old European sources of supply. How the gain can be made permanent is one of the questions which will be considered at the forthcoming annual convention of the National Foreign Trade Council at Pittsburgh, where it will be taken up by Consuls and others from South America. It is not overlooked by the Executive Council of the International High Commission, which strives to make commercial and financial relations with the southern countries more intimate, and which held a meeting in Washington a few days ago.

The value of confidence, respect, good will, and real friendship in the southern continent will be great in their influence upon the extent and character of our trade with the people there after the war. There is testimony showing that our nation is regarded there with suspicion and distrust on account of what took place in Panama and at Washington thirteen years ago. Our old friendly relations with Colombia should, if possible, be renewed. The treaty which was designed to renew them has been neglected in Washington. It provides, in its present form, for the payment of $10,000,000, and contains some expressions of regret which may require amendment. This treaty, recalling a chapter in our history which Americans cannot regard with satisfaction and pride, should be ratified before the end of the present session of Congress, and its expressions of friendship should be in a form acceptable to Colombia. Action should not be delayed until the first session of the new Congress.

THE HONORS OF HOQUIAM.

Hoquiam, in Chehalis County, THE TIMES has loved, and for good reason, pre-eminently among all the hearty, waxing cities of Washington State.

Smiling-seated by Gray's Harbor,
Woods about her, one great arbor,
Hoquiam, O Hoquiam!
Where heaven's purest winds are fanning
And the sea-clam comes to canning,
Hoquiam, O Hoquiam!

So an indigenous singer, not unworthy of his city, new praises whereof flit eastward every day. "Do you know," writes the Secretary of the Hoquiam Commercial Club in The Washingtonian, in a letter which a good Washingtonian sends us, "that "in 1916 the lumber cut of Hoquiam "mills alone amounted to 458,794,- "526 feet?" We know it now and rejoice in it. We know now that Hoquiam, put forth 555,540,000 shingles in 1916. Here is the shingle record, here the biggest logging business of the world. Hoquiam is "the place of the wood," or something like that, isn't it, in the original Indian? It was named in anticipation of its lumber glories.

Not for these, however, is Hoquiam most famous and beloved. Hoquiam is the city that spurned "pork," that protested against her proposed adornment by a Federal public building. For this honesty and renunciation is she precious, and THE TIMES at least will not credit the loucoiasts who pretend that this virtue was but a legend, a joke of wags bound to "get Hoquiam into the newspapers."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Prophetic Reference to Germany.

That sincere patriot and more than fairly able publicist and philosopher, at whom so many of us are still inclined to look askance because his enemies succeeded in teaching us to call him TOM instead of THOMAS PAINE, managed to put in the essays which WASHINGTON so cordially admired and gladly used not a few statements that are as relevant to today's events as to those of his own times. In "Common Sense," for instance, there is this thought-provoking sentence:

> Monarchical Governments, it is true, are never long at rest; the crown itself is a temptation to enterprising ruffians at home; and that degree of pride and insolence ever attendant on regal authority swells into a rupture with foreign Powers in instances where a republican Government, by being formed on more natural principles, would negotiate the mistake.

These words, naturally enough, reflect world conditions as they then existed, and it was not to be expected that PAINE would take into account the possibility of a "monarchical Government" as stable and as democratic, in all except form, as any republic could be. And he did not foresee, either, that there would be republics in which the Presidency would be as much of a temptation to "enterprising ruffians" as ever a crown was or could be. Still, PAINE'S idea, based on monarchies and democracies accurately so called, was sound, and the greater probabilities and facilities for the maintenance of peace under the latter than under the former have been persistently demonstrated in all the years since he wrote. He was, in effect, arguing the superiority of Governments based on the consent of the governed to those of which the basis was force or an imagined divine right to rule, and, so far as any evidence goes to show, the only excuse for calling him "a dirty little atheist" was his denial of reality to that same "right." At any rate, he was not little, he was not dirty, and he was not really an atheist, except in the eyes of those who know no god except their own tribal divinity.

Herr Badewitz Knew His Captives.

Something of light, but not enough for vision at all clear, is thrown by what Deputy Officer BADEWITZ said, or is said to have said, when asked if he did not find it "a ticklish business" to control with a crew of only fifteen men the 400 prisoners on the Yarrowdale. His answer was that he did not even have to keep his charges under hatches—that he gave them the freedom of the ship, and considered the situation quite safe as long as "one had a pistol."

By "one," presumably, he meant each of his own men, and that none of the others was armed, but sixteen against 400 is big odds, even with the weapons all in the hands of the minority, and there is difficulty in understanding why the majority did not even once try to find out what the effect of a well-planned and well-timed rush on their jailers would be. That some of these engaged in it would have been killed and some wounded is more than likely, but that is a consideration that would not have been conclusive—perhaps if would not even have been entertained—by the sailors of olden time. DRAKE'S men would have laughed it to scorn, and so would the men of many another navigator of days not so remote, though much more nearly "civilian," in the modern sense of that word, than were the crews of vessels more or less distinctly warlike.

The chances are, of course, that many of the prisoners on the Yarrowdale were not real sailors at all, but deckhands and stokers with no particular preference for the British flag, and not particularly concerned whether the ship decked in an English or a German port. There were, however, considerably more than sixteen representatives of the afterguard on board, including masters, mates, and minor luminaries like bo'sns, and all these were under some obligation to keep up the traditions of the sea for courage, enterprise, and fidelity to owners' interests. They seem to have been as docile as the rest, and that the confidence of Herr BADEWITZ was not misplaced is demonstrated by the success he achieved in reaching his appointed destination.

That he was not mistaken is just a bit dispiriting, discouraging, and disquieting. It inclines one to lament the passing of "the good old days" when the sea provided material for works of high romance.

A Change in News and Talk.

Much as is the amount of attention at present concentrated on one or another phase of the European war, there is some left for happenings and problems of the sort that formerly were considered not only important but exciting. Everything else does seem somewhat dull and trivial by comparison, and yet this estimate is only the product of comparison, and even new plans and preparations for peace, discussions of the way to achieve it, and the doings and words of men not of the soldier class occupy the front pages of the newspapers far oftener than do accounts of battles.

Indeed, interest in the field operations has distinctly waned, and the process of "attrition" along the trenches is allowed to go on with little notice from anybody except the military experts. Meanwhile, things of the kind that used to constitute news are subjected to a drastic winnowing, and only those that can claim to be of more than parochial moment are allowed to emerge from obscurity. We all get along strangely well without knowledge of the other things, and it may be that one effect of this greatest of wars will be a new sense of relative values—that mere gossip will be relegated to its proper place.

Certainly there has been an elevation in the tone and content of not a little private conversation. Not ward but world politics has become the subject of common talk among great numbers of men. Not all of it is wise or based on sound information, yet it is better than what it replaces, and perhaps it is just as nearly correct.

ART NOTES.

Work of Modern Etchers and Other Exhibitions.

At the American Art Galleries is an exhibition of prints from several collections. It includes a group of Whistlers of a type to test the continued power of this master to move hearts and compel pocketbooks. There is the "French Set" of the first printing, there is the seldom seen "Venus," there are fine impressions of the "Quiet Canal," "Drury Lane" and others of the "Twenty-six Etchings" of 1880, there are Whistler literature and Whistler caricatures.

Other modern etchers in the exhibition are D. Y. Cameron with the splendid "Mosque Doorway" and the romantic "Wingless Chimera," D. S. MacLaughlan with the beautiful "Lynton, England," and La Thangue with "Mullein," Frank Short, Auguste Lepère, Haden, Fantin Latour, Buhot, Legros, and Zorn. Mrs. Margaret F. Everit's collection of etchings and engravings contributes to the exhibition many fine impressions in admirable condition. The collection of mezzotints printed in color, including examples of nearly all the best modern work in this kind, was formed by the late Mrs. William H. Reid. H. W. Jones of Minneapolis is the third principal collector represented.

Two Exhibitions.

At the Folsom Galleries are two exhibitions, one of water colors, the other of oil paintings, that manage to live together in harmony. The oil pictures are by William H. Singer, who is showing his impressions of "Winter in Norway." These impressions make the most direct appeal when the painter introduces humanity in the form of little dwelling places where people cook themselves by their great stoves and get very comfortably through the rigors of the severe season. "Larson's Farm: March," and "A Bit of the Village of Olden," are both interesting canvases filled with the spirit of the cold and the frost. The "River in Winter" is less successful composition. The various planes get into one another's way and destroy any sense of distance or structure. The exhibition lasts until Feb. 3.

The water colors are by Dorothy Freeman, who has painted gardens and other outdoor subjects with a scrupulous, if rather timid, brush. The Bar Harbor "Garden in the Woods" of Mrs. Auchincloss, the gardens of Mrs. F. Allen, Mrs. C. H. Dodge, Mrs. E. J. Heron, Mrs. G. W. Perkins, Mrs. J. J. Tracy, Miss Harriet Ogden, and other devotees of gardenry are given each its individual physiognomy, with only rare excursions into the warm intensities of color and rhythms of growth known to painters who see their gardens subjectively. Miss Freeman's careful draftsmanship makes it safe for her to abandon the punctilious method in favor of as much freedom as she can persuade her conscience to take. Her exhibition lasts until Jan. 31.

AN ALSATIAN PRINCIPLE.

Mr. Wilson's Thought Expressed by Leaders of the Lost Provinces.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is one sentence of the President's address to the Senate which will be read with deep satisfaction by every Frenchman:

> No peace can last, or ought to last, which does not recognise and accept the principle that Governments derive all just powers from the consent of the governed, and that no right anywhere exists to hand people about from sovereignty to sovereignty as if they were property.

Curiously enough, this sentence is nearly word for word the reproduction of the sentence of two solemn protests uttered by the Deputies of Alsace-Lorraine against the German annexation.

In 1871, at the National Assembly at Bordeaux, the thirty-six Deputies of Alsace-Lorraine signed and read a protest in which we read:

> Modern Europe cannot let a people be handed over like a mere flock of sheep.

And in 1874 Mr. Edward Teutsch, Deputy of Saverne, gave a lecture at the tribune of the Reichstag on a protest signed by all the Deputies of Alsace-Lorraine, in which we read:

> Citizens having a soul and an intelligence are not a property which may be handed over and with which one can trade. * * *

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For the last six months I have been with the Eighteenth Regiment of Pennsylvania at El Paso, Texas. Since my return I have frequently been asked if I and my fellow-officers had not been "converted" to the cause of universal military training. The sixty officers of this regiment, with one, or possibly two, exceptions, are unreserved in their advocacy and support of universal military training, and were of this opinion before our tour of duty on the border.

My reason for sending you this note is that in the past the rank and file of the officers in the National Guard have been misrepresented as to the opinions they held—for instance, in this matter of universal military training. To be more specific, the so-called collective opinion of the National Guard officers as represented by those active politically in Washington often misrepresents the opinion held by the great majority of officers. I believe that, if there is any way for you to ascertain the opinion of the officers in other regiments—the New York regiments, for instance—you will find them to be in favor of universal training almost without exception.

Yale Celebrations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Recently certain alumni of Yale University celebrated our defeat of Harvard last Fall. I suggest now that we celebrate also the victory of 1909, of 1900, of 1905, ad infinitum. One would suppose that we never defeated Harvard at football. The last few years have been lean ones, of course, but what of it?

Yale alumni rather should go into mourning for the sorry production that the Dramatic Association thrust upon a complacent graduate body—the most uninteresting performance of the most uninteresting play, by the most uninteresting writer of the most uninteresting period of English history and English literature, as one professor remarked very truly.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial in today's TIMES, "Daybreak in Germany," you quote Maximilian Harden as follows:

> The great Frederick also signed a peace treaty which at the time was considered unsatisfactory, but which his grandson regarded as a work of courageous wisdom.

No historian has ever called the peace of Hubertusburg an unsatisfactory peace. Frederick received all he had demanded. Maximilian Harden has frequently called attention to the fact that Frederick did not gain any territory by that peace treaty and received no indemnity, but as it established Prussia's independence of Austria, it can hardly be called unsatisfactory, and was not so considered at the time or by Frederick himself.

Germany's Resources.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the "Germany's Ability to Pay" communication in today's TIMES, most erroneous ideas of the post bellum state of Germany are given.

If the war cost then $10,000,000,000 the interest on that is only $600,000,000, at 6 per cent. On a population of 60,000,000 that is $10 on every inhabitant. Of course it may be more, but Government expenses will never equal (as stated) one-third of the gross income of the people.

Cutting down the army by 1,500,000 will still leave it very great, and if the average earnings there are $400 a year, this alone would equal $600,000,000, the assumed debt charge of the war.

VERITAS.

Dependent on Foreign Labor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The protest of "Impartial" in your issue of today touches specifically upon the woeful dependence of American agriculture upon foreign labor. On our farm the bookcase is jammed with pamphlets and books from various experiment stations frantically trying to find "a better way," but our only salvation is to find one of these foreigners, who probably cannot read the paper, but who seems to know instinctively where, when, how, and what to plant and get results.

Wishes of Old Alsatians.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In answer to the Alsatian Patri, I would like to state that if a general vote were taken of all old Alsatian families, I am sure the result would be for French rule, as the German rule since 1870 has proved to be the same as now employed in Belgium.

"I HAVE NO LOVER ON THE BATTLEFIELD."

I do not go with sickening fear at heart,
And when the crier calls the latest horror,
I do not start.
I am exempt from terror of the night.
I can lie down serene and unregarding,
Until the light.

But on the battlefield, had I a lover,
How life would purge itself of petty pain!
The petty gain?
I should be one with those who suffer greatly,
With pain all pain above;
And I should know, then, beyond peradventure,
The heart of love!

Complaints that the exhibition of immoral motion pictures and indecent and immoral dancing formed part of the entertainment in high schools on nights when the buildings were given over to use as community centres were filed yesterday with the High School Committee of the Board of Education by Principals of three high schools in Brooklyn and Queens. Dr. Harry A. Potter, Principal of the Bay Ridge High School, attributed the situation to some extent to the fact that admission was charged to the entertainments.

"Like any other public dance hall where admission is charged, these dances attract an undesirable element," said Dr. Potter. He charged that the so-called Bay Ridge Social Centre of the People's Institute, which has the permit to use his high school, conducted its activities on a purely money-making basis, finding the sociological value of its efforts worthless unless a good financial return was made. He said he was informed that the nightly receipts from admissions and the sale of refreshments ran from $40 to $50, all of which was profit after small fees had been paid for janitor service and music, the Board of Education supplying free the hall, the light and heat, and even the piano.

Dr. Frank Rollins of the Bushwick High School and Dr. P. E. Demarest of the Bryant High School in Long Island City had similar complaints to make, although the so-called immorality of the dancing seemed to consist, in the words of Dr. Rollins, of dancing "with bodies in close contact and frequently with the head of the female pressed against that of her partner or reclining on his shoulder."

John Whalen, Dean of the Fordham Law School and Vice President of the Board of Education, promised that the charges would be investigated thoroughly. They were called to the attention of Seymour Barnard, Secretary of the People's Institute, who said that there was nothing improper about the entertainments and they were not run for profit.

JONES ATTACKS WILSON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—President Wilson's reported intention to spend several days of each week at the Capitol in an effort to spur legislation called forth an attack this afternoon from Senator W. L. Jones of Washington, Republican. Senator Jones said he did not wish to introduce any resolution at this time, although he thought the matter should invite "the careful consideration" of the Senate. He spoke, he said, "in view of the notice in the newspapers that the Chief Executive of our country proposes to carry on a systematic and continued system of lobbying in connection with legislation now pending before the Senate."

Senator Jones then asked the Clerk to read sections from the Democratic platforms of 1904 and 1912 relating to "Executive usurpation" and "rights of the States." The first section assails Executive usurpation, and the second urges the preservation in full strength of the Executive, Legislative and Judicial branches of the Federal Government. Senator Jones's remarks provoked no general debate.

In accordance with the general speeding-up effort in which the Democratic leaders are now engaged, the Senate Steering Committee met today and decided to hold a Democratic caucus on Thursday night to map out a final legislative program. The committee itself decided tentatively on the passage of five measures, only three of which were made public. The three are some form of railway strike legislation, the Corrupt Practices bill, and the Webb bill permitting combinations of firms engaged in foreign trade. Members of the committee refused to say what measures had been abandoned as impossible of enaction before March 4.

It was learned today that the President sees no prospect of an extra session, but in spite of his optimism and the stimulus to the work of Congress which has been given by his recent conferences at the Capitol, rumors that an extra session is imminent are growing stronger daily. The feeling is general that unless the Democrats throw overboard the whole majority program with the exception of the essential revenue and appropriation bills, they will never be able to get together on the other measures under consideration in the five and a half weeks remaining before March 4.

SENATE VOTES HIGHER PAY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Senator Borah recommended today a higher range of wages as a preparation for national emergency. He said that $600 and $700 salaries were a menace to the life and efficiency of the nation, and the United States would have cause to regret so low a standard of wages if war ever came. He made the statement in the course of a debate over the question of raising the wages of Government employes.

"I do not understand how labor lives on $600 and $700 a year," Mr. Borah said. "It is doing for America what it did for England. At the outbreak of the war England found that her manhood had suffered a moral and physical breakdown through cheap living standards which compelled them to low-grade the standard of enlistment. America is facing the same condition.

"Germany, whatever else she has done or failed to do, has taken care of her people, while England has not. This is the key to the marvelous and unexpected fighting qualities of the German people, which every one recognizes."

The Senate amended the Legislative Appropriation bill so as to advance the salaries of employes receiving less than $480 by 15 per cent. and those receiving from $480 up to and including $1,000 by 10 per cent.

The amendment takes the place of one proposed by the House which would have raised the pay of higher salaried employes also. The vote was 38 to 29.

SENATE CONFIRMS DONALD.

Organization of the Shipping Board Now Will Be Hastened.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The nomination of John A. Donald of New York as a member of the new Federal Shipping Board was confirmed today by the Senate. When the nominations of the other four members were confirmed last week that of Mr. Donald was held up by opposition of Progressive-Republicans and some Democrats.

The opposition was based on the employment of Chinese crews on ships under British registry operated by a company formerly headed by Mr. Donald. Organization of the board, which was delayed pending action by the Senate, will be effected in the near future.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the account of the trial of Messrs. Egan and Burns, printed in this morning's TIMES, under the heading "Foiled Bernstorff, say Morgan Men," you quote me as saying, among other things:

> We admit that the defendants tapped the Seymour telephone, that they installed a dictaphone, and that they visited the office without permission but we deny that they published the papers they took.

I have made no such statement to any one at any time. There is no charge against the defendants of having "tapped the Seymour telephone." There is no charge of wire tapping in any form or at any place. Nothing of the sort was done there or elsewhere by the defendants, and the fact is that the Seymour telephone private wire was not tapped or interfered with in any way, and no one has ever made any such claim.

The charge against Mr. Burns is the highly technical one of taking copies of certain papers without authority and "publishing" them by delivering them to Mr. Egan, and against the latter, of having also published the same papers by delivering them to another representative of Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. with knowledge that they had been taken and copied without authority.

More than fifty applications for the admission of children as pupils in the new experimental school to be established by the Rockefeller General Education Board, with the aim of "modernising" public school curricula, have been filed by parents. Only about 200 children can be taken care of in the school, even when it is developed to full classes, and, if the present rush continues, it is considered certain that there will be more than that number of applicants from which to select the pupils.

DEBUTANTES FROLIC 'AROUND THE CLOCK'

SOCIETY APPLAUDS SHOW

A brilliant finish to the débutante season was made last night at the Waldorf-Astoria, at the first of the three nightly performances of "Around the Clock," given under the auspices of the Junior League, which has a sustaining membership this season of eighty-eight débutantes. The entertainment was followed by dancing, and preceded by a large number of dinners.

Society gathers annually to pay homage to the débutante, and the Junior League has the reputation of putting on the cleverest amateur shows in town. The idea of presenting the daily life of a débutante from the time she is awakened at 10 o'clock by a hurdy-gurdy, until the after-theatre hour, is a clever one, and it was enthusiastically received by a crowd of fashionable folk that taxed the capacity of the grand ballroom.

The principal buds of the season took part, all of them young, beautiful, and graceful. Miss Ethel Harriman, daughter of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, appeared as the proprietor of a smart modiste shop.

Miss Harriman made the hit of the evening, not only as the pseudo-French shopkeeper, when she lapsed into nasal English as she slouched in realistic fashion about the shop in the absence of customers, but in her clever impersonation of the comedian Frank Tinney in his intimate asides to the audience, when she referred to girls in society. She was vociferously applauded and was encored again and again.

Miss Flora Whitney, daughter of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, was among the dancers in the Zuloaga dance. Miss Alice Huntington, who is the débutante sister of Mrs. Vincent Astor, took part in the military dance.

The varied program of a débutante's day commenced with a hurdy-gurdy dance, of which Miss Constance De-Laney was Chairman, and Seddon Hankey, the organ grinder; and it was a real organ, too. To add to the realism of the street scene, there were skipping rope girls.

Débutante Selects a Frock.

At 11 o'clock breakfast was served, and the audience enjoyed the novelty of seeing Miss Katharine Porter, as a maid, and Sydney S. Breese, as a footman, do clog dance. At the noon hour the débutante selected a frock, among a crowd of shoppers, later enjoying a parade of society girls as mannequins.

The program stated that from 1 to 2 o'clock the débutante is supposed to diet. At 3 o'clock she rehearses for an amateur entertainment, and at 4 she turned the page of a modern magazine and was regaled with a fantasy from the cover page. An hour later she took in a picture exhibition, and this was where the Zuloaga dance was presented.

At night the débutante went to the play, and what she saw was shown in a pantomime, written and arranged by Mrs. Inga Sontum Lie, after the fairy tale by Hans Christian Andersen, "The Shepherdess and the Sheep." Incidental music for this delightful feature was improvised by Miss Anna C. Byrne, who was the orchestra director. The cast of characters in this included Miss Helen Hoadley, Francis Watrous, Maitland Belknap, Murray Hoffman and Reginald Townsend.

Booths were scattered here and there around the ballroom, and society between dances bought flowers, sweets, and soda water. Miss Mary J. Schiefelin was Chairman of the soda fountain booth, where real soda fizzed and spurted in delicious cream sodas. Miss Helen James looked after the programs. Miss Mary Colt was in charge of the cigarette booth, and Miss Alice Lawrence, the flower booth, while Miss Mary Post saw that things ran smoothly at the candy booth. Miss Angelina Krech was head of the Committee on Booths.

In the various other committees were the Misses Beatrice Gordon Pratt, Frances Wilker, Margaret G. Mason, Louise Dixon, Zelina Clark, Josephine de Gersdorff, Katharine Steward, Muriel Winthrop, Margaret Knapp, Augusta P. Dixon, Civilise Alexandre, Mildred Townsend, Ina Kissel, also Mrs. H. P. Pennington, Mrs. Courtlandt Nicoll, Mrs. Graham Blandy, Mrs. Lewis G. Morris, and Mrs. Arthur Swann. Miss Winifred Chisolm is Treasurer this season of the league's Board of Managers. The proceeds of last year's show were more than $20,000, and the league hopes to make several thousand more this season.

AMERICA HONORED AT DINNER IN PARIS

PARIS, Jan. 23.—One hundred and fifty distinguished Frenchmen dined tonight with the Committee of France-America to give public recognition to the aid Americans are lending to France. M. Viviani, Minister of Justice and Public Works, and Jules Cambon, General Secretary of the Foreign Office, represented the French Government, and H. Carton de Wiart, the Belgian Minister of Justice, the Belgian Government. Gabriel Hanotaux of the French Academy presided.

William Graves Sharp, the American Ambassador; Secretary Robert W. Bliss, and Arthur H. Frazier, Second Secretary of the American Embassy, were among the guests, who also included Francisco de la Barra, ex-Provisional President of Mexico; Philippe Roy, Canadian Commissioner General to France; A. Platt Andrews, Chief Inspector of the American Field Ambulance in France, and Professor James Mark Baldwin of Baltimore. The ladies present included Mrs. Sharp, Mmes. De Wiart and Hanotaux, and Miss Daisy Polk of Washington, D. C.

M. Hanotaux spoke feelingly of American generosity and good will. Turning to Ambassador Sharp, he said:

"Mr. Ambassador, we beg you to transmit our feeling to the American Government and nation and to say to them all with the authority that belongs to you that they have our friendship, our fidelity, and our gratitude."

M. Viviani spoke on the appreciation of the French Government and M. De Wiart on Belgium's gratitude to America.

Mr. Sharp, in responding, alluded to the sincerity and affection shown in France toward "the Government and people I have the honor to represent," and said those sentiments were "fully reciprocated by my countrymen."

"Indeed," the Ambassador continued, "one can well understand the thought so happily expressed recently by President Wilson in reference to the relationship existing between the peoples of the two republics, when he said 'Our long-standing and delightful friendship with the people of France has come from a community of ideas and identity of purpose.'"

M. De Wiart, in proposing the health of President Wilson, which was drunk with great cordiality, reminded his audience that the American fraternity had saved from starvation 7,000,000 Belgians. He paid high tribute to the devotion of American women in their work for Belgium.

WEST SIDE PLAN DEFENDED.

Landscape Architect Says $500,000 Would Enhance Riverside's Beauty.

Controller Prendergast yesterday made public a report submitted by him to the Board of Estimate on the real estate valuation of properties involved in the west side improvement, together with a report from George E. Read & Co. on the same subject and one by George E. Kessler of St. Louis, a landscape architect employed by the Board of Estimate.

Mr. Kessler gave general approval of the reconstruction as planned and estimated that the park development could be satisfactorily rearranged at a cost of $500,000. Of this $200,000 would be for additional fill, top soil, and park layout, with a possible additional charge of $300,000 for strengthening the roof structure. This latter figure cannot be determined with exactitude as yet. The entire $500,000 would be charged to the city.

Mr. Kessler said the extension of the park across the roof of the proposed tunnel would make possible "a united and far greater area of park than can ever be possible while the railroad remains at grade and in the open. The building of the tunnel, and by this means the introduction of a long line of level surface against the rugged hillside of the park, introduces the only difficulty in the planning necessary to its restoration along natural lines; but, properly planned, this can be accomplished."

Read & Co.'s report showed a net difference of $61,646 in favor of the city in the balance of the real estate transfers, as compared with the appraisal by the Finance Department. This represents an additional charge against the railroad company. The Read & Co. figures give the total value of the lands and easements conveyed by the city to the railroad company at $11,172,813, with the land and easements proposed to be conveyed by the railroad company to the city at $5,030,795. The difference, 46,-141,545, represents the city's contribution to the improvement.

HY MYERS RETURNS CONTRACT UNSIGNED

Brooklyn Fielder Stands by the Fraternity—Fultz Not Dismayed by Setbacks.

The first open declaration of a holdout from a member of any of the three New York major league clubs came yesterday from Hy Myers, the Brooklyn outfielder. He gave the club officials a surprise by returning his contract unsigned. Myers was one of the National League champions whose salary was not cut. He is satisfied with the terms offered, but decided to stick with the fraternity in its quarrel with organized ball.

The report that several players have signed contracts has in no way impaired the confidence which President Fultz has in the players. "The club owners underestimate the loyalty of the players when they claim that the major league men do not care about the welfare of the minor leaguers," said Fultz yesterday. "The player likes a fight, and when he knows that he is being wronged he will stick to the end."

Mr. Fultz said yesterday that he could not believe that the members of the National Board knew what they were signing when they permitted their names to be placed on the finding on the fraternity requests recently sent out by Secretary John H. Farrell. Fultz said that he knew some of the members of the board personally, and that they would not knowingly affix their names to any paper so misrepresenting the facts.

One flagrant case, according to Mr. Fultz, is the statement in relation to the contracts which empowered the clubs to suspend, without pay, players injured in the service of the club. Secretary Farrell says: "No such clause exists and no clause has ever existed during the last fifteen years that empowered clubs to suspend players injured in service without pay."

Fultz says that within the last few years there have been no less than five cases in which the finding of the National Board has been reversed by the National Commission because the minor league body's decision was based on this very rule.

President Fultz refused to discuss yesterday the fraternity's application for membership in the American Federation of Labor which is now pending in Washington. He said that he had received no communication whatever from federation officials, and would not comment on the report that the American Federation had refused to grant the fraternity a charter.

President Ban Johnson of the American League left Chicago yesterday for Dover Hall, Ga., to join Captain T. L. Huston of the Yankees and Manager Wilbert Robinson of the Brooklyns on a hunting and fishing trip. Before his departure he asserted that fourteen members of the Cleveland Club, twelve of the New York players, twenty of the White Sox, and nine of the Boston Red Sox had already signed for the coming season.

George Whitted of the Phillies has refused to sign his contract, stating that he would not sign until a full understanding had been reached between the fraternity and the magnates. Whitted declares that the principles set forth by the Players' Fraternity made it advisable for the players to uphold their organization.

Al Demaree, who is active in fraternity matters in Chicago, declared yesterday that he had agreed to terms with President Weeghman of the Cubs, but had not yet signed a contract. "I haven't even received a contract from Mr. Weeghman," said Demaree, "but there is no trouble between the club and myself. While I told Mr. Weeghman I couldn't put my name to a contract until the terms were about conditions in the fraternity, I think all those troubles will be settled, and I am preparing to train with the Chicago club."

YANKEE PITCHERS CALLED.

Fifteen Twirlers Ordered to Report at Macon Feb. 26.

Secretary Harry Sparrow of the Yankees sent out notices yesterday to fifteen pitchers to be ready to report at the Yankees' training camp at Macon, Ga., on Monday, Feb. 26. Most of the twirlers and catchers will leave this city on Saturday, Feb. 24, with Manager Bill Donovan. The New York manager has decided to get his pitchers in condition earlier than had been expected because of the strenuous preliminary games arranged with the Boston Braves and the Brooklyn Club.

The pitchers who have been ordered to report are Caldwell, Shawkey, Fisher, Russell, Mogridge, Love, Shocker, Piercy, Tipple, Ross, Ferguson of Bloomfield, N. J.; Bob McGraw from the University of Colorado, Enright of Newark, Munroe from Memphis, and Nick Cullop. The catchers include Walters, Nunamaker, Alexander, and Shaw, who last year played with the Macon (Ga.) Club. Scout Joe Kelley and Coach Duke Farrell will assist Manager Donovan in getting the pitchers in shape. The other players on the squad have been ordered to report on March 5.

FAVORS LIGHT-CREW RACE.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 23.—Joe Wright, coach of the Red and Blue crews, stated here today that he believes the Board of Stewards of the Poughkeepsie regatta should add another race to the Poughkeepsie program for 145-pound crews.

"There are many excellent little oarsmen at Penn, and I am sure the situation is the same at Cornell, Syracuse, Yale, Harvard, Princeton, and Annapolis," said Mr. Wright today. "These little fellows are really fine oarsmen, but their size is such that they have no chance to make the college eight. Once in a while an extra fine wee chap in a season of famine will make the bow seat in his college eight, but this seldom happens.

"I am sure that if the matter were brought to the attention of the Board of Stewards, and that these gentlemen were convinced that the colleges would support such a race, they would add it to the list of events, and it would soon become a yearly fixture."

YALE CLUB TEAM IN LEAD.

CLASS B SQUASH TENNIS.
Standing of the Clubs.

Club.	Won.	Lost.	P. Ct.
Yale	4	1	.800
Columbia	3	2	.600
Princeton	2	3	.400
Crescent A. C.	1	4	.200

The Yale Club representatives gained first place in the Class B division of the Metropolitan Squash Tennis League yesterday afternoon by defeating the invading forces from the Columbia Club on the Yale Club courts by a score of 4 to 1. Up to this contest the teams were tied for first position. In the second match of the day the Princeton Club defeated the Crescent Athletic Club on the Princeton Club courts. This event, too, was decided by a score of 4 to 1.

Yale's victory over Columbia was earned only after a hard struggle. Every match went to three games, and as a team contest it was one of the best that the tournament of this year has developed. In the match between A. C. Scott of the Columbia Club and C. J. Macguire of the Yale Club the score of every contest was 15—11. Scott was the only one of the Columbia Club men to be successful. He took the opening game, lost the second, and won the third.

J. P. Terry, Jr., and H. Bulkley, the latter the Columbia Club representative, had a spirited encounter which developed some really brilliant moments. Terry was vanquished in the opening game at 15—10, and the second, too, threatened his downfall several times. He rallied, however, and was able to place it to his credit with the score 18—15. The final game was well played, but Bulkley could not stop the powerful attacking strokes of his opponent, and lost at 15—11. Another well-played match was that between Otis Guernsey, the former Yale football star, and I. H. Cornell of the Columbia Club. The decision was in favor of Guernsey by 15—12, 15—18, 17—10.

Princeton met with little opposition from the Crescent Athletic Club players. The only one of the latter organization to win was Harold Rowe, who in a three-game encounter defeated R. Monks. Otherwise all of the matches were won in straight games, the Princetonians showing the greater resourcefulness and skill.

The summaries:

YALE CLUB VS. COLUMBIA CLUB.

A. C. Scott, Columbia, defeated C. J. Macguire, Yale, 15—11, 11—15, 15—11; L. Bradford, Yale, defeated H. Kellock, Columbia, 15—13, 15—8, 17—15; J. P. Terry, Yale, defeated H. BROWNE'S OFFER TO DARCY.

New Manager of Garden Proposes $25,000 for Bout with Chip.

It was learned last night that Grant Hugh Browne, who obtained control of Madison Square Garden for the purpose of promoting boxing bouts, had offered the sum of $25,000 to Les Darcy, the Australian boxer, for a ten-round contest with George Chip, the Newcastle, Penn., middleweight, to be staged at the Garden as the opening show. This information, while not official, came from a reliable source after a conference at the Hotel McAlpin, in which Browne and E. T. O'Sullivan, business manager for Darcy, were the principals. It also developed that the offer was not accepted, but that negotiations for the match had not been dropped entirely.

This contest, if arranged, would be a return engagement between these two boxers, for they were matched to oppose each other for twenty rounds in Australia at the time that Darcy took his unannounced departure from there. The Australian had previously knocked out Chip in nine rounds. Mention of Billy Miske or Jack Dillon as prospective opponents for Darcy did not meet with the approval of O'Sullivan yesterday, who was of the opinion that the Australian should have at least one or possibly two previous matches before engaging either of these two boxers. O'Sullivan has under advisement a tempting offer from Tom Andrews, the Milwaukee promoter, for a Darcy bout in that city, but who the Australian's opponent is to be, has not as yet been divulged.

Browne, satisfied with his acquisition of the Garden, left this city late last evening for Montreal where he will attend a meeting of racing officials. Before leaving, however, he said that he had nothing additional to make public in regard to the Garden.

Tex Rickard, the Western promoter, admitted last night that he had learned from an authoritative source that Browne had secured control of the Garden, but added that while it would naturally terminate his negotiations in the matter, it would not necessarily end his association with local boxing competition. Rickard intimated that he was seriously considering a proposition to build an extensive boxing arena, but would not say any thing definite on this point.

Fred A. Wenck, Chairman of the State Athletic Commission, stated last night, that he had not yet received application for a boxing license for Madison Square Garden.

Leonard to Box Bloom.

The management of the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn announced last night that Benny Leonard had been signed to box Phil Bloom, the Brooklyn lightweight, in a return engagement at that club next Tuesday night.

PRINCETON'S FIVE WINS BY A POINT

Tigers in Nip-and-Tuck Battle Nose Out Yale by a 20 to 19 Score.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 23.—Coming from behind in the last half, the Princeton basket ball five squeezed out a victory from its old-time rival, Yale, by the narrow margin of one point in a league contest here tonight. The score was 20 to 19. Although Yale led at the end of the first half, Princeton tied the score early in the second period and from then on neither team was able to gain more than a one-point lead, the margin of the score going from one side to the other in the most thrilling exhibition of basket ball ever seen on the local floor.

The brilliant field work of Pauison, the diminutive Princeton forward, and the accurate shooting of Captain Haas, with five field goals to his credit, were mainly responsible for the Tigers' victory. Princeton took the lead in the early part of the first period, Captain Haas scoring in the first few seconds of play. Then the Blue players opened up an attack that bewildered Princeton, and goals by Mallon, Kinney and Olsen gave Yale a lead which she kept until the end of the period. After Princeton tied the score in the second half neither side was able to get the advantage until a clever goal by Pauison put Princeton ahead. Two hard shots by Olsen and Taft again changed the tide of battle, but Paulson's foul goal and a tally by Haas from the floor gave Princeton the margin that decided the game.

The lineup:

Parmele	R. F.	Kinney
Paulson	L. F.	Olsen
Foster	C.	Garfield
Haas	R. G.	Taft
Rahill	L. G.	Mallon

CORNELL FIVE BEATS PENN.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Jan. 23.—Cornell never gave Pennsylvania a chance to win the intercollegiate basket ball game in the armory here tonight. The Ithacans led the Quakers from the start to the end, winning by 24 to 11, and showing both superior offense and defense. The game was a big surprise to the Cornell rooters, as the champion Pennsylvania team was almost conceded the game before the start.

Coach Sharpe tried a new lineup, the combination showing the best form of any team this season. Coach Sharpe used seven players, substituting Flock for Ortner and Barber for Stewart in the second half after Ortner and Stewart were banished for four personal fouls. Stewart and Kendall played star games for Pennsylvania.

Cornell. (24.)	Position.	Pennsylvania. (11.)
Stewart	L. F.	Latin
Ortner	R. F.	Connolly
Fuller	C.	Jefford
Houck	L. G.	Emery
Kendall	R. G.	McNichol

LADEW'S ENTRY BEST DOG.

Harvey S. Ladew's wire-haired fox terrier, Miss Collar Nott of Paignton, received the highest honors as best dog in the show at the annual midwinter open all-breed match show of the Queensboro Kennel Club at Link's Casino, Astoria, last night. Mr. Ladew brought the dog to this country from England only two weeks ago, and last night's contest was its first appearance in exhibition here, and the event was in the nature of a trial for the Westminster show next month. The judging was done by Vinton Breese. Mrs. Henry Hills's Pomeranian Happy Sunbright was placed as reserve. There were 225 dogs benched, and this number contested in 271 classes.

Clermont S. C.'s Show Off.

An announcement was sent out by the Clermont Sporting Club of Brooklyn last night to the effect that the club's show scheduled for tomorrow night had been canceled. The reason given was that Dick Curley, the club's matchmaker, had been unable to secure a worthy opponent for Benny Leonard, the Harlem lightweight, who was to have appeared in the feature ten-round exhibition.

PENN MAY LOSE FOLWELL.

Authorities Unwilling to Meet Demand for $8,000 Salary.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 23.—Unless Head Coach Bob Folwell decides to reduce his terms for coaching the University of Pennsylvania football eleven next Fall there is a strong possibility that he will not return to the Red and Blue, with which he had such success during the past season.

Folwell has been in the Far West on a hunting trip, having remained behind when the team returned from the game with Oregon at Pasadena, Cal., on New Year's Day. He returned to Philadelphia tonight, and will meet the Football Committee, probably tomorrow, to discuss matters in detail. While in the West Folwell stated in positive terms that he wanted $8,000 for his services next Fall.

Wharton Sinkler, Chairman of the Football Committee, refused to discuss the situation today further than to state that no coaches had been signed for 1917. This means that the selection of the assistants is being held up to await the decision on the head coach.

While Mr. Sinkler could not commit himself on anything further pertaining to the re-engagement of Folwell, it is known that the committee is not willing to meet Folwell's figures of $8,000. It is said that the committee is willing to give a slight advance over the $5,000 paid last season, but that it will not go to as high a figure as Folwell has named.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 23.—The four divisions of men players in the tournament of the Winter Golf League of Advertising Interests played their first match round at Pinehurst today. Most of the well-known contestants from the metropolitan district, including Grantland Rice, Don Parker, and Lou Hamilton, won their matches and were among the sixteen still in line for tomorrow. The women contestants played a second qualifying round today to give some of the players who delayed handing in cards yesterday a chance to qualify for the coming match rounds. J. H. Gannon of Upper Montclair won the prize for the best net score.

SILVER CAT SHOW OPENS.

Mrs. Gilbert Wins Blue in Chinchilla Class with Ganymede.

Cats with a shade of silver in their make-up formed an attraction for a large crowd at the fourth specialty show of the Silver Society in the Winter garden of the Hotel McAlpin yesterday. The exhibition was held for the benefit of the New York Women's League for Animals, and will be continued today, when the best cat in the show will be chosen by Mrs. D. Y. Mathews, the judge.

Though silver was the regulation color, many cats were benched which had the dominating shade hidden by furry coats of almost inky black, and here and there in the rows of benches were apparently plain white cats, which, however, had a substratum of silver to allow of their entrance into competition with the aristocrats of the feline tribe. All those exhibited were placed out of the common or garden class by the possession of pedigrees that admitted them to the inner circle of catdom.

Nearest of all to the pure silver was the chinchilla variety, and in this class the honors fell to Mrs. Olive E. Gilbert, Secretary of the society. In the open class for chinchilla males Mrs. Gilbert carried off the blue with Ganymede, a six-year-old homebred that has won many prizes. Coupled with Mrs. E. A. Griffiths, Mrs. Gilbert also garnered the chief award in the female class with Gloria Victis.

The Misses Champion of Staten Island came to the front in the class for shaded males with ch. Arden Dazzle, and in the female division the same owners scored with Moonflower. Mrs. Lyman B. Sturgis held the whip hand in the classes for silver tabbies, capturing the open class prize for males with Commander Stripes and honors in the female division with ch. Scootch.

Mrs. A. B. Snow of Philadelphia showed the best in the smoked division, a puppy named Floo Floo, which was shown for the first time. Mrs. Norval H. Bussey, President of the society, exhibited the best shaded silver male novice in Prince Winter Puff, and the best chinchilla neuter was shown by Mrs. A. H. Churchill. The cats will be on exhibition until 10 o'clock tonight.

DEAL GETS JERSEY GOLF TITLE EVENT

State Association Awards the Tourney and Elects N. S. Schroeder President.

At the annual meeting of the New Jersey Golf Association, held yesterday in the office of F. H. Thomas, 71 Broadway, it was decided to hold the 1917 amateur championship tournament of the association over the links of the Deal Golf and Country Club, June 7, 8, and 9. The date was practically fixed upon by previous consultation with the officials of the Metropolitan Golf Association, as it is always the desire of the New Jersey officials to hold their tournament before the metropolitan amateur championship. It is felt that the holding of the State championship after the larger event is decided would be in the nature of an anti-climax. The Deal club was the only applicant for the championship tournament.

William Watson of Baltusrol retired as President of the association, and Nathan S. Schroeder of Englewood, Secretary through the season of 1916, was unanimously elected to fill his position. The new President answered the critics of the association, who mentioned the lack of constitution and by-laws as one of its drawbacks, by pointing to the fact that the organization had existed for many years with perfect harmony among the clubs, and new members were being added every year. Last year there were thirty-seven clubs in the association, and seven were added during 1916. One of the new members, the Houvenkopf Country Club, was in the peculiar position of having its Post Office address at Suffern, N. Y., while it pays taxes as New Jersey real estate. In this case it was adjudged to be a New Jersey course, and, as such, eligible for membership in the association.

The awarding of the championship tournament to Deal was not a surprise, as last year the same club made an application for the tournament, and stated at the time that it was ready to offer its course for future tournaments. It has been changed of late years, having lost three of the holes of the old course to the Hollywood Golf Club. It is of championship length and calibre, and is at its best just about the time when the tournament will be played.

PROS TO MEET JUNE 27.

Open Golf Title Tourney to be Completed in Three Days.

Herbert Strong, Secretary of the Professional Golfers' Association, announced yesterday that the pros had decided upon the dates of June 27-29 for the holding of the open championship over the Brae Burn links, if this is agreeable to the officials of the United States Golf Association and the Brae Burn Club. As these organizations some time ago asserted that whatever date the pros agreed upon would be acceptable to them, this apparently settles the matter.

It is planned to finish the tournament in three days this year instead of the usual four days, as it is expected that the qualifying round for the whole field can be held on the first day of the tournament, leaving the last two days for the final seventy-two hole test of the survivors. This is in accordance with the evident intentions of the U. S. G. A. officials with regard to the holding of the amateur championship at the Oakmont links with a correspondingly large entry list, for since the tournament is scheduled to begin on Monday, Aug. 20, it is obviously intended to make the whole field qualify on the first day, so that the tournament will come to an end on the Saturday following.

Basket Ball Game is Postponed.

The basket ball game between the Manhattan College team and the Cathedral College quintet scheduled for the former's court last night was canceled. The game will be played on Feb. 9.

"Pride goeth before a Ford AL"

"Meaning that new car of Brown's, I suppose. Very good—I must pull that on the wife. On the level, though, can you blame a man for being proud of a rich delivery rig like that?"

"Blame him? I should say not. I'm strong for the merchant who keeps up appearances. It means he's proud of his reputation and that means honest goods every time."

"That's right. But there's horse sense in owning one of those delivery cars of Hayes-Diefenderfer, even though it puts three horses out of business. It literally cuts delivery costs in two and lets a merchant cover three times the territory."

"I should say it is longer—130-inch wheel base. They lengthen the frame with a patent attachment and mount a coach body with 90 inches of loading space."

"Must cost something—with a paneled body like that."

"It ought to, but it don't. From $653 to $780, according to style of body and carrying capacity, for they make them to carry a ton. They've got ambulances and undertakers' cars for less than $900."

BETHLEHEM MELON
OVER $30,000,000

Directors Declare 200 Per Cent. Stock Dividend and Offer $15,000,000 Stock at Par.

NEW SHARES HAVE NO VOTES

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation yesterday declared a stock dividend of 200 per cent., and at the same time authorized the sale of $15,000,000 new stock at par. When the action of the Directors is formally ratified at a special meeting for the purpose on Feb. 14 the corporation will have a total outstanding issue of common stock amounting to $90,000,000 upon which dividends of 10 per cent. a year are to be paid. The present common stock capital is $15,000,000, and dividends of 20 per cent. were paid upon the issue last year.

The Bethlehem "melon cutting" will bring to each present holder of 100 shares a dividend of 200 more shares, and if he subscribes for his pro rata portion of the shares to be offered for subscription he will get 100 additional shares for $10,000. Yesterday's quotations for the old stock ranged from $450 to $480 per share, and on the Curb dealings in the new stock on a "when issued" basis were put through at prices extending from $140 a share to $131, the latter being the final quotation. The $15,000,000 stock to be offered for subscription has been underwritten by a syndicate headed by J. & W. Seligman & Co.

While the new stock is to participate in earnings on the same basis as the old, an important difference will exist in that the forthcoming stock will not possess voting power. It will be called "Class B common." When Charles M. Schwab, head of the corporation, was asked after the meeting of Directors why this provision had been made, he replied that certain valid reasons rendered it necessary, but declined to comment further.

"I may say," said he, "that control of the Bethlehem will never pass out of my hands and the hands of my associates."

The present common and preferred, amounting all told to $30,000,000, now enjoy equal voting rights. Mr. Schwab and several friends own a majority of the stocks, and the issue of $45,000,000 new shares without voting privileges leaves the control undisturbed in any event, was learned in quarters of authority that one reason why Mr. Schwab and those close to him in the Bethlehem management arranged to keep the current voting privilege unchanged was because he is under obligation to the British Government through assurances that he would dominate the corporation through stock ownership until certain contracts for munitions were filled. Another reason mentioned in the Street was based on the contentions of holders of the $15,000,000 preferred stock that their voting right would be impaired if the common stock was expanded greatly without a corresponding increase of the preferred, unless the new stock possessed no votes. A third was said to have its roots in the insistence of minority shareowners that asurance be given them that Mr. Schwab's control and management would be practically guaranteed for the future.

The corporation's net earnings in 1916, before interest charges and depreciation were accounted for, amounted to $61,717,329, compared with $23,782,784 in 1915. This was far and away the greatest increase in Bethlehem's history. From this $3,772,575 was deducted for interest, and the exceptionally large sum of $14,350,785 was charged off for depreciation. In the preceding year the depreciation charge was less than one-third as great. The addition to surplus from the year's income was $43,593,968, and the total surplus at the end of the year aggregated $69,370,198, compared with $15,776,390 at the end of 1915. Orders on the books on Jan. 1 totaled $193,500,000, exceeding those of a year before by about $18,000,000.

Mr. Schwab said in a statement after the meeting that a bond issue was under contemplation, although the policy of drawing upon earnings for additions and betterments would still be pursued.

"While the earnings and the proceeds of the $15,000,000 of new common stock are deemed sufficient for all present capital requirements," he asserted, "the board, desiring to make adequate provision for the future without calling too heavily upon the stockholders, has determined that it would be advisable to provide in due course for the creation of a new first and refunding mortgage which shall authorize, under suitable restrictions, the issue of bonds as shall be necessary from time to time. Authority for the creation of this mortgage may be asked of the stockholders at the annual meeting in April."

The increase of capital, Mr. Schwab said, was made necessary because of large appropriations from earnings to construction and working capital. "The corporation proposes to continue the policy of judicious additions to its investments in plant and working capital," he added, "in order to take advantage of the profitable opportunities for additional business which are offered, and to continue its policy of organizing for the further development of a widely diversified commercial output in large volume at the lowest possible cost.

"The board declared a quarterly dividend of 10 per cent. upon the existing common stock of $15,000,000, payable April 2, to stockholders of record March 15, and adopted a resolution declaring that, in case of the increase of the common stock to $60,000,000 by the issue of $45,000,000 additional common stock as proposed, the regular dividends upon the $60,000,000 of common stock for the next succeeding three quarterly periods of the year would be at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum. The board deems it wise to defer until the end of the year the decision as to the advisability of an extra cash dividend from the profits of war orders."

The usual annual dividend of 7 per cent. on the preferred stock was voted by the Directors, to be paid in quarterly installments. The payment dates will be announced later.

BERNSTORFF TO CHEMISTS.

Indication That Germany Does Not Take Chemical Progress Here Seriously.

A report by Secretary of Commerce Redfield telling of the great progress in the development of the chemical industry in the United States since the start of the war was followed at the convention of the American Druggists' Syndicate in Long Island City yesterday by the reading of a message from Count von eBrnstorff, the German Ambassador, in which he said he believed the trade of America with Germany after the war would be greater than before. This was taken by some of the chemists as indicating that Germany did not take seriously chemical development in this country.

Mr. Redfield's report said that while in 1915 this country had exported $27,000,000 worth of chemical manufactures, in 1916 it exported drugs, dyes, and chemicals to a value of $124,000,000.

"In California," the report said, "more than twenty new products have been developed. Before the war our annual domestic productions of aniline, the most important coal tar intermediate, was 800 tons, while we imported 2,500 tons. Today we are manufacturing this product at the rate of 20,000 tons a year. Much is employed in our rubber works and also in explosive factories. The bulk of the output, however, serves for the production of the various standard dyes."

Hudson Maxim protested against the award to Hadefield's of Liverpool of a contract for the manufacture of shells for the American Navy and urged the erection of a tariff wall to protect the new industries of America from the invasion of the products of cheap European labor at the close of the war."

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

The wheat market continued to move in a feverish manner, with price changes irregular. The new-crop months were relatively firmer than the May position and a gradual narrowing of differences appears to be in progress. The export demand was slow and sales for the day were estimated at 200,000 bushels. In the local cash market No. 2 hard Winter wheat was quoted at $2.10; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $2.21; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $2.20¼, all free on board, New York.

CORN.

The corn market showed a firm undertone during the greater part of the day owing to further bullish advices from Argentina and the presence of an export demand. The decline in wheat, however, exerted more or less influence, and after an early advance of ½c to ¾c, prices eased off and closed het unchanged to ⅛c lower. Receipts were larger at primary points, although it was said that country offers were not large. Export sales for the day were estimated at 700,000 bushels. In the local cash market, No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at $1.13, cost, insurance, and freight, New York.

OATS.

The oats market was only moderately active and prices were influenced by the action of wheat and corn, closing ⅝c to ¾c lower, after having shown an early advance. There was said to be a good cash demand in the West, and exporters reported sales of about 500,000 bushels. ACTION ON RAILWAY BILLS.

Commerce Committee May Decide Today on Legislative Program.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Tomorrow is likely to decide the fate in this session of Congress of the Administration program for the prevention of future transportation strikes. The Interstate Commerce Committee plans at its session tomorrow morning to decide what measures, if any, it will report to Congress to settle this problem. It has had the question under consideration ever since the session opened, when the President recommended to Congress the adoption of measures to supplement the action of the Adamson eight-hour law, chief among which were two bills, one prohibiting strikes and lockouts pending a Government investigation and report, and the other giving the President the right to take over and operate roads under the military power in cases of "national emergency."

The President let it be known today that he was confident his railway program would be enacted into law. Senator Newlands, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, who introduced the bills in the Senate, was also optimistic. The Senate Steering Committee voted today that "railway legislation should be on the 'preferred list'" of measures to be enacted at this session.

It now seems probable that the program adopted will consist of a measure authorizing a Government board to investigate railway labor disputes and make a report on its findings solely to get the facts before the public and permit public opinion to form a fair estimate of the case, but without any restraining power on either side in the dispute, and another bill prohibiting the physical obstruction of trains during strikes.

W. S. Stone, Grand Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and L. E. Sheppard, Acting President of the Order of Railway Conductors, testified today before the House Commerce Committee in opposition to the Adamson bill.

BRISBANE'S DIRE WARNING.

He Says He Has Been Told Stocks Will Drop 50 Per Cent. After War.

Stocks in this country are going off 50 per cent. at the close of the war, Arthur Brisbane said prominent men had told him, in a speech which he made last night before the newspaper section of the Advertising Club, 47 West Twenty-fifth Street. Mr. Brisbane spoke on "Co-operation Among Newspapers."

"After the war," he said, "many of the companies won't be able to pay dividends unless they get a tariff. But I have been warned that if all the newspapers told the truth about the situation a panic would be started.

"New securities in the United States of 1,200 out of 330,000 companies represent $3,752,000,000. The Governments of Europe have issued $70,000,000,000 in bonds. Bethmann Hollweg's speech took the big financial men by surprise, and then came Wilson's peace note, whier astounded them because he had violated all traditions by sending it first to the European powers before it was sent to Wall Street."

Protecting the Safety of Bonds

Conservative investment houses not only use the greatest care in the original purchases of bonds they offer customers, but also make a point of seeing that the security back of the bonds is maintained, and, whenever possible, strengthened, up to the time of maturity.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Volume of Trading Much Reduced—The Demand for Bonds.

The life into which the stock market was stirred on Monday by the President's address to the Senate on plans to guarantee the peace of the world after this war is over, was lacking in yesterday's trading on the Stock Exchange. Incidentally the range of prices was much narrower, taking the market as a whole, although some individual issues, prominent in the day's dealings, showed wide changes. Most of these, as it happened, were found among the declines. Opinion regarding the President's address differed very widely, but few people in the financial district found any fresh reason yesterday for looking upon the President's momentous proposals as likely to exert immediate effect upon the market.

In brokerage circles one heard more of the procedure before the Rules Committee of the House, which was holding a session in New York in its inquiry into the alleged leak in respect to President Wilson's peace note, than of the address which he made to the Senate the day before yesterday. The two things are not to be compared in importance, but brokers talked more of the lesser thing because it was much nearer to their own affairs. The Street was somewhat surprised by the request which the committee addressed to the Stock Exchange that it cause its members to produce a record of all their transactions for the period covered by the committee's investigation. That is information of a sort for which previous committees have looked to the individual Stock Exchange houses rather than to the Stock Exchange itself. The Governing Committee has very wide powers in dealing with its own membership, but it disclaims the power to compel members of the Stock Exchange to produce records for other than the Stock Exchange's own use.

With these matters to consider the Street paid relatively little attention to the stock market itself. The result was seen in the decline in the day's dealings to less than one-half of the previous day's total. Activity was much better maintained in the bond department than in stocks. That was in keeping with the tendency in that quarter of the market since the beginning of the new year, when reinvestment demand coupled with increased general interest in the bond market, due in part to the recent unsettlement of the stock market, led to considerable activity and to a substantial forward movement in bond prices. Just now the market is being called upon to absorb a considerable volume of the new issues, including the recently announced $250,000,000 British credit, and one need hardly expect to hear of the heavy over-subscription of all of these issues. That is not needed either for the success of these issues themselves, nor as proof of the substantial character of the general bond demand which is evident enough from the general character of the trading in bonds during the last fortnight.

It is interesting to note that in the plan announced by the Bethlehem Steel directors yesterday stock is to be used to raise the additional money which the company requires, contrary to the earlier report that bonds would be put out for this purpose. This seems the more desirable method of financing for industrial companies, which by the extraordinary character of their orders in these times are confronted with the need of obtaining additional capital despite the very high scale to which their earnings have been advanced.

LONDON TRADING NARROW.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Maturing Treasury bills increased money supplies today. Discount rates were quiet. Russian and French Treasury bills were in good demand.

Business on the Stock Exchange was restricted to neutral bonds and oil stocks. Russian mines, and Argentine rails at steady prices. The French loan and coppers hardened, but the gilt-edged section was practically neglected. American securities declined in sympathy with New York. President Wilson's speech was discussed with interest, but it had no effect on the market.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 62 francs 25 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 81½ centimes. Five per cent. loan, 88 francs 65 centimes.

SABIN QUITS DIRECTORATE.

J. R. Floyd Takes His Place on International Agricultural Board.

Charles H. Sabin, President of the Guaranty Trust Company, has resigned from the board of the International Agricultural Corporation and has been succeeded by J. R. Floyd, Secretary and Assistant Treasurer.

John J. Watson, Jr., Vice President and Treasurer of the corporation, said at the stockholders' meeting yesterday that he was against the declaration at this time of a dividend on the preferred stock, on which 28 per cent. has accumulated. He explained that the company's finances had improved, with a reduction of $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 in liabilities. He said that deliveries of 18,000 tons of acid a month were now being received from the Tennessee Copper Company under a contract which had been the cause of a dispute between the two companies, and that he considered the new management of the Tennessee favorable to the International.

TO EXTEND FOREIGN TRADE.

Pacific Development Corporation Formed, with $5,000,000 Capital.

Another step in the development of this country's foreign trade has been taken in the formation of the Pacific Development Corporation, to take over the Pacific Commercial Company, the largest American commercial agency in the Philippines, and Anderson Meyer & Co., Ltd., one of the leading American commercial houses in China. The new company has been organized under the laws of New York with an authorized capital of $5,000,000, of which $1,000,000 has been subscribed in cash at par to provide working capital. Additional stock will be issued for the acquisition of the two established concerns.

The directors of the new company are Galen L. Stone of Hayden, Stone & Co., Chairman; Guy W. Currier of Curtier, Young & Pillsbury; William Endicott of Kidder, Peabody & Co.; H. E. Fleischhacker of the Anglo-London Paris National Bank of San Francisco; Francis R. Hart, Vice Chairman of the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston; S. P. Loewenstein, President of the Pacific Commercial Company; V. Meyer, President of Anderson Meyer & Co., Ltd.; Andrew W. Preston, President of the United Fruit Company; Chester P. Dana, of Siems & Carey; Wallace D. Simmons, President of the Simmons Hardware Company of St. Louis; Royall Victor of Sullivan & Cromwell, Herbert H. White of the University Press, Cambridge, and Edward B. Bruce, President of the new company.

Mr. Stone said that the organization of the new company was a logical development of eighteen years of work in the building of an American trading business in the Orient. A beginning was made in 1899 through the organization of the California Corporation of Castle Brothers, Wolf & Stone. The Pacific Commercial Company was formed in 1911, and Anderson Meyer & Co. in 1915, the latter taking over the business which V. Meyer of Shanghai had built up.

We summarize from a letter received from Mr. B. F. Johnston, President of the United Sugar Companies, as follows:

1st. The United Sugar Companies have been in active operation for over twenty years and are the largest producers in the Republic of Mexico, making a refined product in the form of granulated and cube sugar, which it distributes directly to the trade through its own offices and agencies.

2nd. In addition to its sugar business, the company manufactures alcohol on a large scale and also does a large merchandise and export business; its operations have not been interrupted during any of the disturbed conditions in Mexico, having reached its highest development during that period; in fact, now is the psychological moment for investments in Mexico, as the reconstruction period, already upon us, will offer vast opportunities.

3rd. During the past twenty years its earnings have steadily increased and are at present more than ample to cover dividends on both its Preferred and Common stocks. Its capitalization is ultra-conservative, as, after the introduction of the new capital and the retirement of all outstanding bonds ($300,000), there will remain ahead of the Common stock only $1,000,000 of 7% Preferred stock, represented by Cash in the Treasury; current liquid assets double the amount of current liabilities, and fixed assets, such as Real Estate, Refineries, Distilleries, etc., largely in excess of the total par value of its Common stock, without placing any value whatever on trade marks, good will, or the earning power of an old established business.

The only interest or dividend charges ahead of the Common stock will be $70,000.00 annually on the $1,000,000 Preferred issue.

We offer the unsold balance of this issue, subject to prior sale and change in price, at

"BLUE SKY" LAWS INDORSED.

Investment Bankers Association President Explains Attitude.

Commenting upon the decision of the United States Supreme Court, upholding the constitutionality of the "blue sky" laws of Ohio, Michigan and South Dakota, Lewis B. Franklin, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company and President of the Investment Bankers Association of America, said yesterday:

"The Investment Bankers Association has already favored the aim of blue-sky legislation as expressed by the Attorney General of Michigan, 'to stop the sale of stock in fly-by-night concerns, visionary oil wells, distant gold mines and other like fraudulent exploitations.' If just this aim had been pursued by the laws as passed there would never have been any litigation over them.

"Under some of the earlier 1913 acts it was impossible for the investment banker to do business. These acts were held unconstitutional and the States accepted these decisions and revised their laws. The acts now upheld are the later acts and the Investment Bankers Association participated in the appeals largely for the purpose of ascertaining the extent of the legislative power over the subject. Now that we know what this power is, it should be possible to legislate constructively and effectively against fraud in the promotion or distribution of securities.

"The association has appointed a committee for this work, and through this committee and its counsel is already engaged in an effort to meet constructively the desires of the intelligent State officials interested in the subject. It is in hearty sympathy with every proper use of State power. It is only opposed to its abuse. The association desires especially to safeguard the normal interstate business without destroying it."

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—Another step in the reorganization of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, in the hands of a receiver since April, 1915, was taken today when a jury before Judge Carpenter in the United States District Court returned a verdict awarding judgment for $21,560,513 against the railroad in favor of the Bankers Trust Company of New York.

No defense was offered to the suit which was agreed to as part of the process necessary to a reorganization of the railway company.

The Bankers Trust Company was Trustee of a $20,000,000 issue of twenty-year 5 per cent. gold debentures of the railway. The suit was for the principal and interest due.

CHEMICAL OFFICIALS RESIGN

Disagreement Over Policy Leads to Their Withdrawal.

Differences over matters of policy were said yesterday to be back of the withdrawal of a number of men from the management of the Federal Dyestuff and Chemical Company, recently organized by Archibald S. White of White & Co. A widespread stock-selling campaign followed the organization of the company.

At a meeting of the board yesterday George T. Bishop, President and Director; George H. Schuler, assistant to the President; Ralph L. Fuller, Vice President; Mark W. Potter, a Director, and E. G. Tillotson of Cleveland, also a Director, turned in their resignations.

E. A. McPherson and E. S. Duell, Vice Presidents, will assume charge of the company until successors have been elected. Mr. Bishop has been chosen First Vice President of Ralph L. Fuller Company, Inc., of Cleveland, dealers in chemicals and dyes, and will shortly take up his new duties.

Franklin Brewing Company Assigns

Justice Callaghan, in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, yesterday granted permission to Louis Karasik and Christopher Meyerdicks to file a provisional bond of $50,000 as assignees of the Franklin Brewing Company of 414 Flushing Avenue. The petitioners state that the liabilities of the company amount to $1,155,000, of which $541,000 is secured by the property holdings of the company and other collateral. The assets are declared to be $1,200,000. The statement is sworn to by the Secretary of the brewing company. A petition in involuntary bankruptcy against the company was filed by creditors in the United States District Court. The petitioners state that the defendant company filed an assignment for the benefit of its creditors.

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Burlap Demand Opens Slowly.

After more active buying than for some time during the closing days of last week, the demand for burlaps in the local market is opening slowly this week. Lightweights, spot stocks of which are practically nil in this market, are asked for more freely than heavy grades, and the demand there is, as a result, prices are strengthening, 8-ounce 40s to arrive now costing from about 8.10 cents in carload lots to 8.25 cents in smaller quantities. Heavy goods can be had for spot shipment in fair quantities, quotations being based on 9.50 cents for 10½-ounce 40s. Not much that was new appeared in the day's reports from Calcutta and Dundee.

More Fall Prices Are Made.

Prices to the jobbing, cutting-up, and export trades have been made on kimono flannels by the T. Holt Haywood department of F. Vietor & Achelis. The line contains a variety of styles in light and dark shades, and the new quotations show advances of 2 to 3 cents a yard over last season's. Customers are allowed to call for any proportion of darks in their orders that they may wish. It is expected that the line will be sold up and withdrawn this week, as lines of flannels below the kimono grade are now practically sold up and withdrawn. Opening Fall prices on the dark shades of Aurora dress ginghams have also been made. In spite of the fact that prices on these goods are also 2 to 3 cents a yard higher than the last figures, it is expected that the line will be withdrawn within the next forty-eight hours.

Hard Coal Prices Steady.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that speculative prices in the local anthracite market have fluctuated very little during the last week, weather conditions having been sufficiently wintry to cause steadiness, but not severe enough to lead to further increases. While domestic sizes display great strength, the most abnormal situation is found in the steam grades. Retailers report that, regardless of price, it is impossible to get enough pea, buckwheat, and rice coal to take care of their regular trade. Marked confusion and price irregularity have developed in the bituminous trade as a result of dissimilar traffic conditions on different railroads.

Fall Color Card Issued.

The Fall color card just issued by the Textile Color Card Association of the United States contains thirty-four shades and eight shades especially for furs, the latter an innovation. The colors given are lighter than those which were popular last Fall, but not quite as brilliant as those which will feature the coming Spring season. The range starts off with a group called brass. These colors will continue the vogue for the popular gold shades. A line of blues follow, there are some further colors on the gold order, and after these come greens, browns, reds, and grays. The nine shades that were so good last Fall also get representation. The object in putting out fur colors, it is explained, is to make it easier to prepare fur trimmings.

Dress Goods Trade Active.

Delivery, and not the sale of merchandise, is the big question in the dress goods trade. Some of the mills have limited the amount of goods to be sold in order to protect themselves as far as prices are concerned, and also to enable them to keep their deliveries practically as positive on time. Stocks are so short that it is only in special cases that the mill agents can meet the demand from buyers who want spot goods. In some quarters of the market the Fall business is well under way, although the leading dress goods factor has not yet made a formal opening of lines.

May Adopt Open-Price Plan.

Several of the representative manufacturing clothiers are so interested in the success of the open price competitive plan as it has worked out in other industries that there is quite some likelihood of it being adopted in the clothing trade. There will be difficulties, to the clothiers, in introducing the scheme in their industry, but a way may be found to overcome these. There is some talk of classifying the trade so that each grade may have the information that it most desires. The question will be brought up before the clothiers' meeting next month.

Jobbers Selling Wash Goods.

Not only is the advance guard of retail buyers in this city beginning to take novelty wash goods well, but jobbers' salesmen who are now out on second trips for Spring are sending in good business from their various territories. All kinds of combinations of printed fabrics are in demand, the call ranging from the sheerest and daintiest flower-decorated cottons to fairly heavy skirtings in a variety of weaves and patterns. One of the newest skirtings offered here is known as Ki Ki, and shows several Japanese designs in unusual colorings and groupings on beach cloth grounds of a khaki shade. It can be retailed profitably at 25 cents a yard, and comes in 34 and 35 inch widths. It is said to be selling well.

Gray Goods Demand Small.

The uncertainty of the trend of the cotton market was one of the reasons advanced yesterday as to why gray goods buying was not more active here, and another was that jobbers and nearby goods from second hands, which have been selling under mill prices are getting harder to find. A third reason was the unwillingness of the mills to meet second-hand prices for goods wanted this side of April 1. Neither printcloths nor sheetings sold any too freely, though there appeared to be more activity to the former than to the latter. Some nibbling at lawns and other combed-yarn goods has come to hand, but the business booked was not large. Mill prices for printcloths closed nominally as follows:

39-inch, 68-72s	8¼c	38½-inch, 60-52s	7c
38½-inch, 64-64s	7¾c	27-inch, 64-60s	5½c

Still Wish Samples Duty Free.

Carl W. Stern, of M. J. Corbett & Co., Chairman of the American Importers' Association's committee on Customs Procedure, together with T. S. Sibbaretts, counsel of the association, and other importers, called upon Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Peters in Washington yesterday and urged that the department rescind its recent ruling putting all textile samples on the dutiable list. Up to last month it had been the practice of the department to admit free samples not exceeding one inch in length. The domestic woolen and worsted manufacturing associations are understood to be responsible for the Government's action in denying the free entry privilege. If the department refuses to modify its order to customs officials importers may bring a test case, as the present tariff fails to provide specifically for the classification of samples.

Beaded Bags in High Favor.

The difficulty in securing sufficient quantities of beads in the Orient makes of women's handbags in their efforts to meet the heavy Spring demand for these goods. All sorts and conditions of bags are being seen, and some of the novelty bags that are offered to the retail trade for the new season run into pretty high figures for sale over the counter. One of these, which is made of imported black lustre faille, is known as the Aviatrix bag, the name being derived from the novel wing effects embodied in it. It is finished with a medallion tassel of vari-colored beads, and is heavily garnitured with bead designs that include several colors, graduating from dark to light. It retails at $18.

Mrs. Laura A. Peck Left $300,000.

The will of Mrs. Laura A. Peck, who died Jan. 14 at 500 Madison Avenue, disposes of an estate of more than $300,000, including rare works of art, vases, and tapestries, and valuable paintings which at one time belonged to the collection of her father, the late John T. Martin. The chief legatees are Norman and Nelson Peck, sons. The testatrix directed that a loan of $100,000 to James M. Waters, her son by her deceased husband, Robert Newton Waters, be not charged against him, but regarded as a gift made under the will. One of the paintings disposed of in the will is "The Betrothal," by Florent Willies.

BUSINESS NOTES.

PRICES UP AND DOWN IN COTTON MARKET

Price movements on the Cotton Exchange yesterday were decidely brisk, and the volume of business was heavier than for some days past, with large operators taking a leading part in bringing about sharp declines and advances. The market opened at from 2 to 27 above Monday's closing quotations on new trade buying and covering by shorts, but it was not long before certain important interests began a heavy selling movement which drove prices downward, the decline in the case of May contracts amounting to 20 points compared with the opening price, and 18 points under Monday's final figure. Late in the afternoon, however, prices quickly recovered all the loss sustained in the earlier trading, which amounted to 43 points in the case of certain months compared with the lowest quotations of the morning. The market closed steady with May at 17.08@17.10.

The comment of the brokers was that a heavy short interest had been created during the last few days from activities on the bear side by operators who not so long ago were enthusiastic bulls.

The Census Report, showing 11,147,118 bales ginned to January 16 was in line with expectations, and consequently attracted slight attention. No change was reported in the ocean freight situation, but the exports of cotton yesterday, 60,000 bales for the day elicited considerable comment in view of the fact that much had been said lately about the difficulties of shipping cotton by reason of the activities of commerce raiders, submarines and Governmental restrictions.

James Stillman's Gift Will be Used to Relieve Orphans of Members of Legion of Honor.

The American Society for the Relief of French War Orphans, 120 Broadway, announced last night that James Stillman, one of the Vice Presidents of the society, had sent to Jules J. Jusserand, the French Ambassador in Washington, a draft for $200,000, payable to President Poincaré of France, to be used for the relief of children of members of the Legion of Honor whose fathers have lost their lives, or may lose them, in "the service of France."

Last week the society cabled $50,000 to Paris to be applied to the relief of French war orphans, and it is understood that a second large contribution is shortly to be cabled. It is estimated that Mr. Stillman's gift will provide maintenance for about 5,500 children for one year.

FIRE 40 FEET BELOW STREET

Bankers Whose Office Was Menaced Had Removed Securities.

In the smoke-filled sub-cellar of the old five-story office building at 31 and 33 Broadway, forty feet below the street, relays of firemen yesterday morning fought a blaze for several hours. Three alarms were turned in before enough apparatus and men were assembled to put out the fire. The damage was $20,000. The burned sub-cellar was used as a storeroom by the Mercantile Lunch Company. It had evidently been burning for some time when discovered.

On the ground floor are the banking rooms of C. B. Richards & Co., agents of the Lloyd Italiano. The Dougherty Detective Agency is on the third, fourth and fifth floors. The second is unoccupied.

After the walls had been chopped through on several floors the fire was traced to the sub-cellar, which by this time had filled with smoke. Acting Battalion Chief John Kelly was overcome by smoke and fell down a small spiral stairway. Luke Henry, Chief Kenlon's chauffeur, who was immediately behind, stumbled over him, but was able to carry Kelly to the street.

During the height of the fire Oscar L. Richards, a member of the banking firm, arrived at his office. He said he had deposited $250,000 in securities and cash in the vaults of a trust company the previous afternoon. This was done, he said, on the advice of his cashier, who explained he had a premonition that "something was going to happen."

MRS. BYRNE STARTS LOTS OF STRIKES

LOSES ON HABEAS WRIT

But Delay Keeps Her in the Tombs Over Night—New Appeal to Justice Cropsey Tomorrow.

Mrs. Ethel Byrne, sister of Mrs. Margaret Sanger, who was sentenced on Monday to spend thirty days in the workhouse on Blackwell's Island because she had distributed birth control literature at the clinic of her sister, 46 Amboy Street, Brooklyn, did not spend last night in Cell 66 that had been prepared for her at the workhouse, although she had been transported to the island yesterday. A writ of habeas corpus brought her back before she was fairly installed, and when this had been dismissed, late yesterday afternoon, it was too late to return her to Blackwell's Island, so she spent the night in the Tombs. She will be taken to the workhouse this morning.

But Mrs. Byrne didn't permit this postponement to interfere with the hunger strike which, she had announced, would mark her protest at what she considers the injustice done to her. She declined food and drink at the Tombs, and said she had partaken of neither since Monday morning, when she had had a cup of coffee for breakfast. Her rebellion is designed to go to greater lengths, in fact, for she resolutely refused, in her brief detention in the workhouse yesterday, to submit to a physical examination, and to take the bath prescribed as an initial formality for all inmates. Also she announced that she did not intend to work, although labor is supposed to be the portion of those sentenced to the workhouse.

"Oh, well, you are clean enough," was the final verdict of the authorities when Mrs. Byrne had refused to take the bath, and they handed her the workhouse uniform of blue and white striped gingham, which she donned without protest. Women reporters were present, and to them Mrs. Byrne declared:

"I do not intend to have any physical contact. My sentence is unjust, and I shall protest against it in this way. I shall not work, eat, or drink while I am here."

Burdette G. Lewis, Commissioner of Correction, declared, however, that Mrs. Byrne would be forced to eat if her fast threatend to do her any real injury. Said he:

May Be Forcibly Fed.

"I have not paid much attention to Mrs. Byrne's threatened hunger strike. We have had threats of hunger strikes before. We have had people who said they were on hunger strikes, but we never had a real, honest-to-goodness hunger strike yet. While some prisoners were announcing that they were voluntarily starving in prison we were keeping a record of what they ate, and they did eat.

"I do not expect there will be any trouble with Mrs. Byrne. Persons have often gone without food for more than thirty days and have remained healthy. If, however, the physicians on the island should report that Mrs. Byrne was dying, or if experts should say she must be fed to be kept alive, we certainly shall feed her forcibly.

"I do not propose to issue bulletins on the progress of the hunger strike Mrs. Byrne says she will declare. I do not know whether or not she has started it yet. Advertising is what she wants, and I will not help her to get it. I will issue a permit to a woman reporter for each newspaper to visit the prison and see how Mrs. Byrne has been received. They can make only one visit, however, and cannot keep going there to see Mrs. Byrne and have her talk voluminously on the progress of the strike."

There is a possibility that Mrs. Byrne may be released from the workhouse on Thursday. Justice Cropsey in the Brooklyn Supreme Court is then to hear argument on an application for a certificate of reasonable doubt, and, should he grant it, Mrs. Byrne might be liberated on bail pending a final decision in her case. The first effort to liberate her failed yesterday when Judge A. N. Hand in the Federal District Court dismissed the writ of habeas corpus he had granted to J. J. Goldstein, Mrs. Byrne's counsel, on the lawyer's contention that the section of the code under which Mrs. Byrne was convicted was "arbitrary, unreasonable, and oppressive," and in its enactment the Legislature had violated the Federal Constitution by transcending its police power. Judge Hand remanded Mrs. Byrne to the workhouse, although he gave a signed order to Mr. Goldstein so that the lawyer might carry the case on appeal to the United States Circuit Court.

It was this writ which gave Mrs. Byrne her brief respite, bringing her from the workhouse into court. She was extremely pale when she appeared with J. F. Cotter, Warden of the workhouse, and a matron, but she walked sturdily and sat stiffly throughout the court proceedings.

Not the Look of a Hunger Striker.

Many who watched her remarked that Mrs. Byrne, in appearance and manner, was the last person who might be expected to undertake a strike against public authorities. Everything in her voice and manner suggested gentleness. Even in telling reporters at the workhouse what she expected to do, there was no tone of belligerency in her voice. She made an unusually pleasing appearance even in the ugly uniform of the workhouse. She has soft, brown eyes, soft hair of the same warm brown, with a suggestion of curl that gives it a slightly fluffy appearance. She has clear, firm skin, and her hands are small and well shaped.

She told how she had become associated with her sister in birth control work through Mrs. Sanger's interest in socialism. But long before that both sisters had learned in their own home the evil of too large families and their willingness to fight for what they believe is a right they inherited naturally.

"My father was a born rebel," said Mrs. Byrne yesterday. "He was a Roman Catholic living in a community up-State composed largely of Catholics, but one day when something in the church offended him, he got up and left it and never went back. It made it hard for us, for his business was the making of monuments, and it was the Catholics who used the elaborate monuments. It ruined his business. Then we knew what it meant to have a larger family than there were means to care for. We were a family of ten children. My father and mother were very fond of each other and I know they would have been very much happier together if they had not had the burden of so many children. My mother lived to be only 45."

Mrs. Byrne will probably face a new conflict with authority when she reaches the Workhouse this morning. Yesterday she evaded the customary physical examination until the order came requiring her immediate presence in Judge Hand's court, but she left behind her a vigorous-looking young woman doctor, who flourished a stethoscope and seemed anxious to get to work.

Otherwise, however, Mrs. Byrne won't have a hard time. Mrs. Margaret A. Slattery, the head matron of the workhouse, has arranged to place Mrs. Byrne in Cell 66, which is on the upper tier, and she will occupy it alone.

"We'll make her as comfortable as possible," said Mrs. Slattery, though she had told Mrs. Byrne on her arrival that if she hadn't been foolish she wouldn't have been there.

SEEK CLUB WOMEN'S VOTES.

Several Tickets in Field for Federation's Annual Election.

Members of the Women's Federation, an organization composed of members and officers of women's clubs, are beginning their campaigns for the election to be held by the federation at its annual meeting on Feb. 2 at the Hotel Astor. Several tickets are already in the field, and the "Hastings Campaign Committee," which hopes to elect a ticket headed by Mrs. Harry Hastings, held a meeting yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. James Hedges Crowell, 1,045 Fifth Avenue. Most of the candidates named on this ticket are Presidents or former Presidents of other women's organizations. Among them are Mrs. Frederick H. Sherman, candidate for First Vice President; Mrs. Simon Baruch, for Second Vice President; Mrs. Susan W. Allen, for Third Vice President; Mrs. Mary M. Lilly, for Recording Secretary; Mrs. George Owens, for Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. L. E. Hart, for Treasurer, and Mrs. William B. Smith, for Historian.

About 900 delegates are expected to attend the annual meeting, and it is expected that the total attendance, including guests, will be near 1,500. Balloting will continue all day. Election is for a two-year term, and there is a one-term plank in the Federation's platform. Mrs. Eugene J. Grant is the retiring President.

PLANS FOR CLOTHING PEACE.

Workers and Manufacturers to Meet Today to Draw Agreement.

It was announced last night that officers of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America would meet a committee from the America Clothing Manufacturers' Association today to draft a peace agreement between the two organizations. President Sidney Hillman of the union said yesterday that the agreement would be modeled on the agreements between the union and two of the largest clothing manufacturers in the world. The agreement will differ from the protocol in the cloak industry and a similar protocol in the men's clothing industry, abandoned a year ago, in that there will be a time limit of one or two years, and the Board of Arbitration will be limited in its findings to the terms of the contract.

New Courses at C. C. N. Y.

Registration in the Evening Session and the Division of Vocational Subjects and Civic Administration of the College of the City of New York began last night and will continue until Feb. 2. The course in fuel economy and boiler management has attracted wide attention on the part of real estate operators, landlords, and janitors who realize that men properly trained in scientific fuel economy can save thousands of dollars which go up annually in smoke.

Because of the special interest in foreign commerce arising out of the war, the City College will offer four short courses in foreign trade, beginning Feb. 5.

THREAT TO RAILWAY; GETS A PENSION

Land Agent Who Talked of Exposure Was "Cared For" by Southern Pacific.

KRUTTSCHNITT ADMITS IT

Government Attempt to Show the Value of Oil Lands Was Known by Recipient.

The prosecution in the case of the Government's so-called "billion-dollar fraud suit" against the Southern Pacific Company and twenty-one other defendants, seeking the cancellation of land patents in the San Joaquin Valley, in California, succeeded in putting on the record yesterday that a discharged Southern Pacific employe was placed on its pension list after he had threatened an exposure, and had demanded to be retired. This was introduced by E. J. Justice, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, in the course of his cross-examination of Julius Kruttschnitt, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific, who pased his second day as a witness before Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe of the Southern District Court of California, who is conducting the hearings.

Mr. Kruttschnitt held, in explaining the incident, that a man who threatened with serious exposure the corporation by which he was employed should not be barred solely for that reason from the enjoyment of a pension he might have earned by long and faithful service.

The cross-examination of Mr. Kruttschnitt was conducted by Mr. Justice. The burden of the prosecution is to prove the Southern Pacific knew of the oil possibilities of the land granted to the corporation for agricultural development, and therefore obtained the patents fraudulently.

In an effort to show that the company had a guilty conscience, Mr. Justice requested Mr. Kruttschnitt to identify this letter:

Berkeley, Cal.,

Dear Sir: On Jan. 8, 1908, I addressed you at Chicago, inclosing copy of a letter I had that day sent to E. E. Calvin, relative to action taken by Mr. Eberlein in forcing me out of my position as Assistant Land Agent. To this letter Mr. Calvin replied briefly that he had no jurisdiction over the affairs of the Land Department and could offer me no employment. * * * I served the company faithfully and well many years and hoped that its interests would always be mine; but if a hearing and fair treatment are not accorded me without further delay my services will be at the disposal of the newspaper press, the United States Attorney General, and others. * * *

Very respectfully yours,
GEO. A. STONE.

The witness said he answered the letter of Stone with the explanation that it had been referred to W. L. Cornish, Vice President.

"How long after that was it that Stone went on the pension list?" asked Mr. Justice.

"I do not know, but the records will show," said Mr. Kruttschnitt.

Asked by Charles R. Lewers, representing the railroad, if he did not know Stone had died, Mr. Kruttschnitt answered in the negative. "I should hold any Director seriously at fault who barred any employe from a pension merely because of an impertinent letter," he added.

The prosecution placed in the hands of the witness a copy of a personal letter from Charles W. Eberlein, Acting Land Agent of the Southern Pacific, to W. D. Cornish, dated Sept. 3, 1904. The writer said that the Kern Trading Oil Company had been organized, but that he was in the dark as to its objects, rights, &c., although he had asked for this information several times.

On Sept. 10, 1904, Mr. Eberlein wrote to C. H. Markham, then General Manager of the Southern Pacific, now President of the Illinois Central, saying he had studied the lease thoroughly and that it was not in condition for execution.

"We have selected a large body of lands interspersed with the lands sought to be conveyed by this lease and which we have represented as non-mineral in character," said he. "Should the existence of this lease become known it would go a long way toward establishing the mineral character of the lands referred to, and which are still unpatented.

"We could not successfully reach a mineral filing after we have practically established the mineral character of the land. I would suggest delay at least until this matter of patent can be adjusted."

Mr. Kruttschnitt was asked if he had associated the letter of Stone with the letter of Eberlein, and he testified that he had not.

MITCHELL ELECTED SHERIFF

Queens Election Yesterday Cost Taxpayers Nearly $35,000.

Acting Sheriff Samuel J. Mitchell, Democrat, was chosen Sheriff of Queens County in the special election held yesterday. The vote was small, little more than one-third of that cast last November. Mr. Mitchell succeeds Paul Stiers, who was shot and killed by Frank Taff, a prisoner, last October. The election cost the taxpayers $32,057. Mitchell got 18,255 votes, Wilsnack, (Rep.,) 6,051, and Wall, (Soc.,) 892.

Mitchell's victory was taken as an indication of the strength of Arthur E. Keating, Democratic leader of Queens, who is friendly to Borough President Connolly. The successful candidate carried 179 out of the 189 election districts.
